3d Gambler Is Reported Robbed Here Of $17,000

'Ryebread' Shulman, Crap Game Victim, Shuns Police, Like Warring and Scheve

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Robert (Ryebread) Shulman is included in the select list of those victimized by holdup men who specialize in "taking" local gamblers, it was learned last night.

Shulman, so the reports go, was robbed of $17,000 when three gunmen knocked off a floating crap game in Northeast Washington last November.

He has made no formal complaint to police, following the etiquette peculiar to his profession, and also observed by subsequent victims, Emmitt Warring, one-time numbers bigshot, and Theodore (Little Joe) Scheve, another of the fraternity.

Crap Game Robbed

The original report was that the crap game was robbed of $25,000, but Shulman's name did not enter the picture then.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, was asked if Shulman was a victim.

"He was one of the men asked about the job," said Barrett, "but he didn't admit he was one of those robbed."

However, certain sources said Shulman, sometimes known, too, as "No-odds" Shulman, had been taken, but good!

Shulman, 38, was arrested in November, 1945, on two numbers charges, and subsequently convicted.

Barrett has said that he believes the same three out-of-town hoodlums held up that crap game and Warring. The Scheve holdup has been attributed to local talent.

Held Up In Taxicab

Warring was held up in his home, 3900 Macomb st. nw., on January 9 and forced to hand over the cash contents of a wall safe. The "take" was later estimated at $20,000.

Scheve, whose father, Joseph H. (Big Joe) Scheve, also a gambler, was shot to death December 10 in a 9th st. poolroom, was held up and robbed of about $2000 January 15.

Police learned that Scheve was a passenger in a cab parked in the 500 block of 4th st. ne. when three gunmen appeared and held him up.

The cab was taken, but later recovered. The driver reported the theft, and police asked Scheve to visit headquarters for questioning. Scheve declined to make a formal complaint.

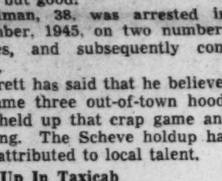

So police now are investigating a series of holdups which have netted close to $50,000, none officially reported—nor likely to be.

Brink's Delivers $1910 Payroll, 2 Bandits Take It

Boston, Jan. 24 (U.P.)— Two masked gunmen held up the swank Union Club and fled with a $1910 payroll 25 minutes after it was delivered by an armored car of Brink's, Inc., victim of a $1,500,000 robbery a week ago tonight.

Only a few minutes earlier a bookkeeper had joked with the Brink's drivers about the $1,500,000 holdup. She was counting the payroll when the bandits walked in.

Fairless Says Steel Pensions Hiked Prices

Profits Could Not Provide Funds, He Tells Congress Unit

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Officers of the United States Steel Corporation Insisted before a Congressional committee yesterday that rising costs forced them to raise the price of steel by $3.82 a ton last December.

The rise followed the granting of a pension plan to their employes, members of the CIO United Steel workers. The cost of that measure, according to Benjamin F. Fairless, "Big Steel's" president, could not come from profits, because the corporation has not made a "fair return" from its business in the last 20 years.

Fairless led off a group of witnesses in a four-day hearing being conducted by the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report. It is seeking to determine whether the price rise was justified.

A Presidential fact-finding board, reporting at the time of the steel strike, and the President's Council of Economic Advisers, reporting after the fact, said the steel industry could and should absorb

Bates Winner In House Race

Son Seeking Seat of D. C. Air Crash Victim

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 24 (AP).—Lieut. Comdr. William H. Bates was nominated tonight as the Republican candidate for the congressional seat of his father, the late Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.).

Essex County Commissioner C. F. Nelson Pratt, a former Massachusetts legislator, conceded Bates' victory.

He conceded with unofficial returns from 22 of the Sixth Congressional District's 122 districts giving Bates 7443 votes to 1100 for Pratt.

State Senator John W. Coddaire, jr., of Haverhill was leading in the Democratic fight, over a former Congressman from another district, Richard M. Russell. The first 22 precincts gave Coddaire 533 and Russell 446.

Widnall Wins

Hackensack, N. J., Jan. 24 (AP).—William B. Widnall, a State legislator who bucked the GOP organization, today won the Republican nomination for the congressional seat vacated by imprisoned J. Parnell Thomas.

The 43-year-old attorney upset the preelection favorite, Harry C. Harper, onetime big league baseball pitcher who had organization support.

Widnall will face Democrat George T. English, in the February 6 special election. English, a former mayor of East Paterson, N. J., was unopposed in the primary.

Morrison Takes Lead

New Orleans, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Mayor Delesseps S. Morrison, a 38-year-old Army veteran and reformer, took a wide lead tonight in first returns from New Orleans' mayoralty race—one of 29 races in a City-Parish-State Democratic primary election.

Returns from 107 of 307 precincts in the mayoralty race gave: Morrison, 35,595 votes; Charles Zatarain, 18,561; Alvin A. Cobb, 1426; Mrs. Louis Patrick Dillon, 308, and Anthony Deckelhann, 273.

County Acts To Ease Jam In Schools

Prince Georges Officials Authorize $1,584,000 Sum For 10 Projects

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

The Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday authorized ten new school projects estimated to cost $1,584,000, which they hope to pay for out of money on hand.

The commissioners approved, without argument, the request of County School Superintendent G. Gardner Shugart for construction of nine new elementary schools or additions, and one high school.

The projects were made possible because $1,494,000 was shaved from six projects already under contract. They are being built with State aid funds under loan and grant provisions. This saving was effected through low bids on the six projects.

Allowance Made

With similar luck, Shugart explained, the 10 new projects can be kept within the available funds. But if bids are higher than expected, county school authorities have provided a sliding scale to keep within their maximum funds—allowing from 4 to 6 rooms for a school, for instance, depending upon project cost.

The authorized construction will provide for about 2700 pupils and 66 teaching stations. With two other elementary schools now under way—those at Mount Ranier-Brentwood and Langley Park—Shugart figures he will have room for 3600 additional children by fall. He hopes to have the projects authorized yesterday completed by the beginning of the 1950-51 school term.

Here are the projects:

At Landover Hills, an elementary school of 4 rooms, plus a multi-purpose room; at Cheverly, a 4-room elementary school.

Other Projects

At Columbia Park, a 6-room elementary school plus multi-purpose room; in the Langley Park area, an 8-to-10-room elementary school; at Surrattsville, a 10-room high school and gymnasium; at Holly Groove-Croom, a Negro elementary school of from 4 to 6 rooms, plus a multi-purpose room.

At Bradbury Heights, a 4-room elementary school and multipurpose room; at Camp Springs, addition of a multipurpose room; at Lanham, a similar addition.

County officials worked out the ten additional projects from a balance of $1,701,480 in direct State grant and a $6,340,600 loan under the School Aid law. They used this money to plan for four high schools and two elementary schools, which should be ready for

'Rule' Petition Half Signed

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Sponsors of the District home rule bill yesterday passed the halfway mark in their drive to force the legislation to a House vote.

Of the 218 signatures of the House members required to push the measure to the floor, 113 had been obtained by the close of yesterday's session, sponsors of the bill reported.

The bill, approved last spring by the Senate is blocked in the House District Committee. Signatures of 218 House members, constituting a majority, on a petition filed by Representative John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.) would take the bill away from the District committee, and present it directly for a House vote.

Representative Kennedy joined with Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) first cosigner of the petition, in applauding members who helped get the petition past the halfway mark.

Kennedy, saying he was greatly encouraged, voiced the hope other members would sign speedily to boost the total to 218.

CTC Rate Hike Nearby Argued

By Sam Zagoria

Baltimore, Jan. 24.—The State people's counsel joined with eight Washington area residents today in opposing a Capital Transit Co. rate increase, arguing that a boost will result in fewer patrons and less revenue.

The company told the Maryland State Public Service Commission that an increase in Montgomery and Prince Georges zone rates from 5 to 7 cents was necessary immediately to continue Free State Service. Even this amount, the firm said, was $228,000 less than it needed to wipe out the current operating deficit.

Capital Transit asked the commission to put the new rates into effect immediately, offering to issue receipts for all rides and make refunds if the boost is not granted entirely or in part. This was immediately refused, and the commission said it would announce the effective date, if any, in its decision.

The company's only witness, J. E. Heberle, vice president and comptroller, said the Maryland

Hiss Attacked In Both Houses

By Bert Andrews
NYHT News Service

Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) denounced Alger Hiss on the Senate floor yesterday as "a former Russian espionage agent" and asked Congress to find out if a Kremlin-headed Communist conspiracy is still operating in the State Department.

Bridges' attack came as Hiss, former assistant to Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayres, awaited sentencing in New York at 10:30 a. m. today on two counts of perjury. He faces five years and $2000 fine on each count.

Bridges is one of four members of Congress to criticize Hiss, who accompanied the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt to Yalta. Bridges said the conviction raises three questions:

"Is all of our foreign policy aimed at concealing the error of a war-weary President or is there a more positive motive? Does the Communist conspiracy, headed in the Kremlin, still have its agents working in our State Department? Because of the appeasers—and

Television Betrays Boxer Mims; Spotted on Screen as Deserter

Mr. Mims, do you like television? %x@‡&$†ez (answer censored)

Holly R. Mims, 31-year-old professional middleweight slugger, does not like television.

Neither does he like being in the stockade at Fort Belvoir.

Mims fought an eight-rounder at Turners Arena Monday night. It was televised. An old buddy recognized him. Criminal Investigation Division agents of the Army picked up Mims yesterday as a long-sought deserter.

Mims, according to the CID, was stationed at Fort Devens, Mass., in 1945 when he was given a weekend pass to visit Washington. That was the last seen of Mims.

Not that Mims has been any shrinking violet since 1945. He didn't change his name. His name was bannered in headlines on local sports pages when he won the Golden Gloves middleweight championship in 1947. His publicity continued when he won a fair share of success in pro ranks.

Monday night Mims took on Leon Daughtry at Turner's Arena and dropped a split decision.

Fate—and television—stepped in.

An old buddy of Mims was at home watching the fights on television. When the television camera picked up Mims in a corner closeup, the buddy recognized him.

He telephoned the office of the Provost Marshal General yesterday morning and the CID was notified. In its files, the CID found a "Form 45" on Mims, meaning he was wanted as a deserter. His dossier listed an address of 1647 New Jersey ave. nw.

CID agents went to the address and told members of Mims' family they were newspaper reporters and wanted to interview him. When Mims appeared, they arrested him.

FEPC Vote, 5-5, Bottles Bill Again

Calendar Wednesday May Be Utilized to Keep Issue Alive in House Controversy

By Robert C. Albright
Post-Reporter

The Administration's hot-potato FEPC bill was bottled up by a tie 5-to-5 vote in the House Rules Committee yesterday but civil rights forces promptly hit on a new device to keep the issue alive.

The new FEPC weapon was House "calendar Wednesday"—the seldom used procedure which committee chairmen having bills to report can call them up every midweek.

Normally, calendar Wednesdays are "passed over" by unanimous consent, but for the first time in five months the House roll of committees will be called in the House today.

It still might take weeks to force FEPC to a vote under this procedure. Four committee chairmen, most of them from the South, have precedence over House Labor Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) and his civil rights measure.

Today's first call, for example, will go to House Armed Forces Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.). Vinson said he had five bills to call up, each with a potential three-hour debate limit.

With Republicans plainly split over FEPC, and Southern members determined to block it, political maneuvering on both sides of the aisle kept the issue on the coals.

1. FEPC forces claimed "around 90" signatures on a special discharge petition filed Monday by Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. (D.-Lib., N. Y.). The petition requires 218 signatures to force it to a House vote.

2. Regardless of whether Roosevelt's petition is signed up, Speaker Sam Rayburn (Tex.), who by-passed Lesinski on Monday, may again be faced with the FEPC "recognition" dilemma on February 13, next House "discharge day" under the so-called 21-day rule.

3. Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio), after voting against FEPC clearance in the House Rules Committee yesterday, moved for reconsideration of the 5-to-5 tie count when two absentee GOP members of the committee return. A reconsideration vote is likely to produce another tie, next time 6 to 6.

Programming a number of minor bills to keep the Senate busy, Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said the Senate might reach the FEPC issue around the middle of February. Lucas said Senate timing of the issue had no relation to the House dispute.

Acheson Backs Formosan Aid

Secretary of State Acheson was reported to have approved yesterday a congressional move to send about 28 million dollars in economic aid to the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa.

Acheson's stand was disclosed by Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee after the Secretary had spent two hours with the lawmakers reviewing Far Eastern developments.

Connally told reporters that Acheson "is agreeable" to the proposal for limited economic assistance but said the Secretary did not suggest how the money should be spent.

But a Republican committee member who asked that his name not be used said later that the Chinese Nationalists have asked 50 million dollars for general economic purposes and for currency stabilization.

He said he doubts whether the committee would approve any funds for currency stabilization but reported that the group figured that 28 million to 30 million dollars "will take care" of the island's economic needs.

Bill to Admit 320,000 DPs Is Agreed on

McCarran Committee Meets Deadline With Truman-Urged Changes

By The Associated Press

A bill to permit 320,000 displaced persons to enter this country by June 30, 1951, was approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee last night. The total includes the approximately 124,000 who have already entered.

The present law authorizes the entry into the United States of only 205,000 persons in the two-year period ending June 30, 1950.

The committee, by a vote of 10 to 3, approved a bill which would make other changes in the present displaced persons law which President Truman has urged.

For one thing, it would shift the date by which displaced persons must have entered European DP camps to be eligible for entry into this country.

The date in the present law is December, 1945. The bill which the committee approved would change that to January 1, 1949.

The committee's action was announced by Chairman McCarran (D., Nev.), who termed the measure "generally satisfactory." He said the action was taken by amending a measure already ap-

Marine Gets Key Staff Job

Gen. Megee Transferred In Service Amity Move

A top-ranking Marine aviator has just been assigned to a key post on the Armed Forces' Joint Staff, in a significant move to help heal wounds resulting from the interservice row.

Brig. Gen. Vernon E. Megee, the Department of Defense confirmed, has been transferred from duty as assistant director of Marine aviation, to be one of three deputy directors of the Joint Staff. He will be the deputy on intelligence.

The assignment was regarded as meaningful for these reasons:

(1) Megee was one of the group of Navy admirals and Marine generals who testified before the House Armed Services Committee last fall in the so-called "revolt."

(2) He is an outstanding advocate of and expert in the use of air power for close support of ground forces as distinguished from strategic bombing.

(3) Marine leaders bitterly complained during the hearings that they had no "representation" in the top planning agencies at the Pentagon and their views thus were not considered.

Defense circles believe that Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, new chief of naval operations, had engineered Megee's appointment as part of an expressed purpose to give the Marines greater representation in joint councils.

Meanwhile, it was announced that President Truman had approved the selection of five Marine colonels for promotion to brigadier general. They are:

John Crawford McQueen, director, Twelfth Marine Corps Reserve District, San Francisco.

Raymond Paul Coffman, Industrial College of Armed Forces here.

James Austin Stuart, National War College here.

George Franklin Good, jr., Professor of Naval Science, Stanford University.

Merrill Barber Twining, senior resident member, Marine Corps Board, Quantico.

Sherman Is Confirmed For Denfeld Naval Post

Unanimous Action In Senate; McCarthy Asks Impeachment Of Sec. Matthews

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman was confirmed as Chief of Naval Operations yesterday, after Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) demanded the impeachment of Navy Secretary Francis Matthews.

Final Senate approval of the 53-year-old naval aviator was unanimous and followed an angry two-day debate between Republicans and Administration supporters.

The delay resulted not from opposition to Sherman—who was lauded by both sides in the row—but from GOP attacks on Matthews and the ouster of Sherman's predecessor, Admiral Louis Denfeld.

They challenged the legality of Denfeld's removal by Matthews and contended it was an unwarranted reprisal for his Congressional testimony last fall. The former CNO was fired 14 days after he sharply criticized Department of Defense policies which he said were seriously weakening the Navy.

"Reprisal" was Denied

Matthews denied it was a "reprisal"— which the Defense Department had promised would not take place—but was justified because he could no longer work with Denfeld.

Senator McCarthy, who led the assault on the Navy Secretary, declared that if the Senate had the right to impeach, it should impeach Matthews.

Acting Majority Floor Leader Spessard L. Holland of Florida rebuked McCarthy for his suggestion. Senator Holland said it was "highly improper" for a member of the Senate to talk of impeachment and say what the charges should be, since the Senate sits as a panel of judges in such cases.

Only the House has the right to impeach under the Constitution. Then the Senate judges the case.

He Lists Four Grounds

McCarthy said that four grounds exist for the impeachment of the Navy Secretary:

(1) "Untruthfulness" before a Senate committee.

(2) Complete "incompetence" to perform his duties.

(3) "Complete disloyalty" to the Navy, "for which he should be fighting."

(4) Enforcing a "new and dangerous rule" that "if any officer comes before the Senate and tells

Architects Map Freedom Fair Building Contest

The American Institute of Architects announced yesterday it will have ready by Friday a proposal and time schedule for a Nationwide architectural competition for the sesquicentennial's Freedom Fair buildings.

AIA President Ralph Walker wrote Carter T. Barron, the sesqui's executive vice chairman, that the group was gratified to learn that the sesqui would welcome such a proposal. The AIA proposed the idea last week.

Barron said last night he wants the AIA to put its plan before the next Sesqui executive committee meeting, to be called as soon as the chairman, Joseph C. McGarraghy, returns to Washington, probably early next week. A full commission meeting is expected to be called early next month.

Board Defers Action On School Principal

The Board of Education yesterday shelved until February 1 any official discussion of the appointment of a principal of the new Sousa Junior High School.

Board members voted, 5 to 3, against Miss McAuliffe's appointment last week after Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning submitted her nomination. It was the first time that the board ever rejected a candidate recommended by the school head.

Accord Is Reported Reached on Arms Aid

By the United Press

The United States and Great Britain have agreed on the transfer of American arms to Britain under the military assistance program, it was disclosed last night. The accord broke a two-month deadlock.

A British Embassy spokesman said the last few drafting changes probably would be made today.

Since November 3, the United States has been discussing bilateral agreements with Britain and seven other Atlantic Security Pact nations which will share one billion dollars worth of free United States weapons.

Great Britain is expected to sign Friday and the other nations about the same time.

British sources said the arrangement finally accepted would allow Britain to send some of the weapons to Hongkong, for example, with the provisions that Britain would try to replace in the western European defense stockpile any such arms shipped.

Under the military assistance program, Congress appropriated one billion dollars to arm the Atlantic pact partners. Some surplus weapons will go into the program without charge, except for handling costs, so the arms that the nations will get free will have an original purchase value of $1,900,000,000.

These weapons, mostly heavy equipment which Europe finds difficult to produce, should begin moving overseas in four or five weeks. The schedule originally called for the shipments to begin about last December 1.

Details of which countries will get exactly which weapons is classified as secret but there have been numerous reports Britain will receive B-29 Superfortresses.

It is understood the United State and Britain originally agreed tentatively for the transfer of a large number of the planes but Britain lost enthusiasm for them when they found that replacement parts were scarce and that some of the planes from the mothball fleet had deteriorated.

Voorhees' Post

Bendetsen Is Named to Army Office

President Truman yesterday nominated Karl R. Bendetsen of California to be Assistant Secretary of the Army. Bendetsen, a San Francisco lawyer, has been serving as a special consultant to Secretary of the Army Gray.

The post that Bendetsen is taking has been vacant since Tracy Voorhees was elevated to the Army's No. 2 civilian job as undersecretary last August.

Bendetsen has had long service in Army ranks both as an enlisted man and officer. Now 42, he was only 14 when he signed up for the National Guard in Washington State.

Shortly before World War II he came to Washington as a captain in the Judge Advocate General's office. He moved over to the War Department General Staff and rose to the rank of colonel.

Near the close of the war, he organized the Army's civil affairs division.

Bill for More DPs Approved

proved by the House in 10 or 12 places.

The agreement was reached on the eve of the date the Senate had ordered the committee to report out a DP bill. The order was issued late in the last session. The House bill had been approved by the committee over the protests of McCarran, who was in Europe at the time. After a heated floor fight, the Senate sent the measure back to committee with instructions to bring out a bill by January 25.

The new bill is expected to be introduced tomorrow.

A bill sponsored by Representative Celler (D., N. Y.) and passed by the House last year would have permitted 339,000 displaced persons to enter the country by June 30, 1951.

Discrimination by Date

While the Senate committee cut the total number, it adopted the eligibility date of January 1, 1949 contained in the Celler Bill. Opponents of the present law have argued that the December, 1945, cutoff date discriminated against many Jews from Poland who did not reach DP camps until 1946 or 1947.

In addition to the total of 320,000 who would be authorized, the Senate bill would permit the entry of 5000 orphans and 5000 other youngsters who have been adopted by U. S. overseas military and Government personnel.

Within the authorized entry, the committee made specific provision for visas to be issued to:

1. 10,000 Greeks displaced in the Greek civil war.

2. 18,000 Poles who were members of the Polish armed forces which fought on the side of the Allies during World War II, and who now are actually displaced persons.

3. 4000 refugees in Shanghai on "grounds they already have been assimilated in the Philippines and elsewhere."

30 Percent Farmers

The Senate committee's bill continued and in one place strengthened two provisions of the present law which the House-approved measure would have junked. They are the requirement that 30 percent of the DPs must be agriculturists, and 40 percent must be from occupied territories.

In the case of the agriculturists, the Senate bill would require that visas to the required 30 percent be limited to people who have had at least two years of farm experience.

McCarran told reporters he thinks the new bill strengthens safeguards against the entry of undesirable aliens.

The bill specifically bars Communists, Marxists and persons who bore arms against the United States in the last war.

It also gives the United States consular service and the immigration and naturalization service a veto power over eligibility of DP's. Their eligibility is now determined by the displaced persons commission.

Jakarta, Indonesia, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—The Indonesian government today accused Dutch authorities of indirectly supporting Capt. Paul (Turk) Westerling, a renegade Dutch officer whose rebels seized control of Bandoeng for several hours yesterday.

At the same time, Premier Mohammed Hatta said the Indonesian cabinet had issued orders for Westerling's immediate arrest.

Westerling's private army, estimated at 10,000, ousted Republican troops from Bandoeng, important West Java city of about 166,000, and in the evening, made a surprise withdrawal after the Dutch "suggested" Westerling leave the city.

communism by open attack on secret penetration."

The Conservative manifesto pledges to stop iron and steel nationalization, put some road transport back into private enterprise, decentralize the coal and railway administrations and "decided the future of the gas and electricity boards when we have had more experience in the operation."

"We shall stop State bulk buying," the platform said. "The Liverpool cotton market will be reopened, as well as other commodity markets as conditions permit."

Under Labor, the government buys or controls the buying of most imports.

The manifesto said the value of social security services have been reduced by inflation.

"By energetic action they can be saved and their value maintained," the manifesto said. "Britain can only enjoy the social services for which she is prepared to work.

"We are determined to give a solid base of social security below which none shall fall and above which each must be encouraged to rise to the utmost limit of his ability."

Encouragement of Investment

The conservatives would abolish the ministries of civil aviation and of supply, and retrench in public relations departments, and control over local authorities.

They also would abolish the official direction of labor. They promised to discuss a "worker's charter," which would lay down the principle that extra effort should always bring extra reward and that promotion shall be by merit.

The manifesto proposed "to encourage the investment of American as well as British capital in the Empire," and try to reach a permanent settlement of war debts incurred by Britain for defending India and Egypt.

70 B-29s Expected To Go to Britain

London, Jan. 24 (AP).—The United States will give Britain about 70 Superfortresses (B-29s) and some sorely needed raw materials under the arms aid agreement, diplomatic officials said tonight.

Total value of the aid Britain expects was said to be around 30 million dollars.

Lack of Funds Seen Checking Medical Study

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 24 (AP).—Harvard President James Bryant Conant says the nation is faced with a "serious crisis in medical education" because medical schools need money.

The problem, he said in his annual university report, is "far too serious" to be solved by a few universities.

He suggested "even closer cooperation" between medical schools and hospitals as well as "some degree of mutual long-range planning."

Dr. Conant said financial troubles harassed medical faculties increasingly after World War I but these were "postponed" in the 1920's and 1930's.

"Then, after World War II," he said, "the deluge came, precipitated by the rapid decline in the value of the dollar and the increased labor costs of maintaining and operating laboratories and hospitals.

"As a consequence," Dr. Conant added, "the nation is faced with an educational problem of the gravest sort . . ."

Freshman Illiteracy Gaining, Educator Says

Los Angeles, Jan. 24 (AP).—A Chicago educator says the college freshman is growing increasingly illiterate, unable to read or think. But it isn't the poor frosh's fault.

High schools, says the president of the University of Chicago, are serving up a watered down educational potion which produces boobs instead of brain trusts.

In an attack on the American school system, Dr. Ernest Cadman Colwell said in an interview yesterday, that "part of the difficulty is due to the attempt to unload on the elementary and high schools education for everything. There are too many distractions in the curriculum.

"Another difficulty is the contemptuous way we have treated the teaching profession in the way we pay teachers, the way we ride herd on them, in the disregard for the teaching profession."

Teacher Unit Stresses Need of Good Training

The National Commission on Teacher Education and Professional Standards said yesterday it is becoming deeply concerned over faulty training of teachers.

The commission, a part of the National Education Association, said a national conference on teacher training standards will be held at Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., June 28 to July 1.

Cook Says Soviet Held Him in Camp 3 Years

Giessen, Germany, Jan. 24 (AP).—A man who identified himself as an American citizen said today he had been freed after three years in a Russian camp.

He told U. S. authorities he was Rudolf Frey, 67, and said he was a former ship's cook and had lived in Los Angeles.

Frey said he was jailed by the Russians on charges of spying after a visit to Berlin in 1946. He was sent to the concentration camp at Sachsenhausen, which was recently closed.

Hume School Gets Go-Ahead In Arlington

Changing his previous recommendation, William A. Early, Arlington school superintendent, told the County School Board to "go ahead with plans" to build the new Hume School.

Early withdrew his earlier suggestion to shelve the plans because of the heavy cost of the site.

Residents Back Site

The superintendent said many residents in the neighborhood of the school "do not think the price is excessive . . . and are seemingly 100 percent behind the board's paying it."

Coincident with Early's new recommendation, the board was informed that a condemnation commission decision which set the site price will be contested in Arlington Circuit Court today.

The commission set $8250 an acre for 6.6 acres of the proposed eight-acre site.

Motion Due Today

The motion, to be filed in court today, will contend that the price is excessive, that "prejudicial" evidence was allowed, and that "not all of the commissioners were disinterested," James Simmonds, school board attorney, said.

The board also voted to pay $3200 for two lots needed to complete the site of a new Hoffman-Boston elementary school at S. 14th st., near Shirley hwy.

The $3200 price for the 8000 square feet was set earlier yesterday by another condemnation commission in Arlington Circuit Court.

CIO Urges Genocide Action; Bar Calls Convention Futile

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The issue of whether or not the United Nations Genocide Convention will halt slave labor and mass murder behind Russia's Iron Curtain was placed before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations urged American ratification in the name of an estimated 11,000,000 persons the CIO said were being worked to death in Soviet slave-labor camps.

The American Bar Association, on the other hand, urged American rejection of the proposed convention on the ground that as it is drafted it simply appeases Russia, and would in no way prevent the only crimes of genocide and mass human slavery in progress today.

Statement by Carey

James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer, said in a prepared statement:

"Both Hitler and Stalin organized the greatest machinery for literally squeezing the blood out of human beings for two purposes: first, to get human energy without pay, and secondly, to kill, through overwork, the undesirable people.

"The population of slave labor camps in Germany reached almost 11 million . . . the number of inmates from the Baltic states in the Siberian slave labor camps, including the salt mines, is certainly higher."

George A. Finch of Washington, representing the American Bar Association's committee on peace and law through the U. N., said that, as the convention is now drawn, "we've already conceded the cold war to Russia in matters of genocide."

Sees "Cloak for Genocides"

Finch maintained that since the convention omitted any reference to the protection of "political and economic groups," the door is left wide "for Russia to cloak all of its genocides." Russia, he said, has merely to claim it is not conducting any killings of persons by racial or religious groups but merely as enemies of the state on political grounds.

He said that the American Jewish League Against Communism recently sent a letter to the Secretary General of the United Nations documenting a previous charge that "400,000 Jews were deported from the Ukraine and White Russia to Archangel and Siberia, because they were considered too pro-democratic to be left on the Soviet borders in case of possible war."

This, again, he said, in the event that the Soviet Union should accept the convention, could be held to be "political" and not racial.

On the other hand, Abraham Schusterman of the Four Synagogue Council of America, said that six million Jewish martyrs of genocide "speak through me," in asking that the United States join with other nations in declaring genocide a crime.

Treaty 'Gap' Pointed Out

Both bar association spokesmen and Leander H. Perez, District Attorney for Louisiana, called attention to the fact the convention would not make any contracting party or Government responsible for genocidal crimes committed by it against its own nationals.

The bar association spokesmen, who included Alfred J. Schweppe of Seattle and Carl B. Rix of Milwaukee, also noted that the convention speaks of genocide as being "part of a group," which they contended could mean one person. Under that interpretation, a murder of a single Negro, for example, they maintained could be called genocide.

Perez and the opposing lawyers also said that ratification of the genocide convention as submitted will displace State constitutions and laws wherever they may conflict with the provisions of the convention.

Finch and other bar association spokesmen emphasized they were strongly in favor of really outlawing genocide, but were opposed to this particular treaty.

Thomas J. Dodd of Hartford, Conn., who assisted Justice Jackson at the Nuernberg trials, said that while the convention does not go far enough, he favored ratification in the hope that it could be enlarged later to include political and economic groups.

the truth he must take the consequences."

Untruthfulness Issue

McCarthy had previously contended that Matthews was either "untruthful or incompetent" for telling the Senate Armed Services Committee that Denfeld never was issued his commission for a second term as CNO.

Matthews denied the accusation, saying that the commission, while signed by himself and President Truman, was "irregularly" delivered to Denfeld. Chairman Millard Tydings (D., Md.) defended the Navy Secretary, saying his explanation was honest and that McCarthy was making mountains out of molehills for reasons of partisan politics.

McCarthy, a former Marine officer, was ruthless in renewing his attack yesterday.

"I don't think the man is guilty of lying in his own mind," he said, "I don't think he remembers from day to day what he has done."

Congressional observers did not expect any serious attempt at impeachment proceedings in the House following McCarthy's demand. But it was expected that GOP members of the Senate Armed Services Committee will renew their insistence on quizzing Matthews further.

Denfeld for Confirmation

McCarthy told the Senate he talked to Admiral Denfeld on the phone yesterday, and that the former CNO had urged prompt confirmation of his successor.

He also stated that Denfeld had told him that he would submit a formal resignation as CNO, to remove any legal doubt about Sherman's status. Denfeld already has applied for retirement on March 1.

Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.) joined the attack yesterday, urging legislation to protect service officers from "reprisals" after testimony before Congress. Criticizing the Administration for firing Denfeld, and "intimidating" other officers, Kem said:

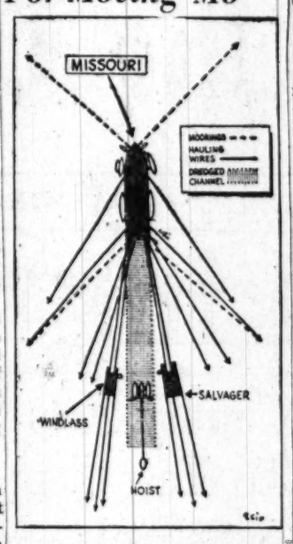

"His ouster was only part of the calculated pattern of intimidation. At any rate it emphasized the extent to which the Administration may go to slap down those who dare oppose it . . .

"Do those who dare to entertain thoughts of their own, or to present their honest views when called on to do so by the Congress, face humiliation and degradation and the loss of their careers?"

Bridges also assailed Ambassador-at-Large Phillip C. Jessup, now on special assignment to the Far East, and Secretary of State Dean Acheson, who assigned him. He said Acheson "apparently" sent Jessup on the assignment because he anticipates "the need for further whitewash."

"The man who is making this first-hand survey had one little duty to attend to before he left for the Far East," Bridges said. "He interrupted the prosecution of Alger Hiss to testify for the defense. He told the jury about this former Russian espionage agent's excellent reputation for truth and honesty. He had to interrupt this trial because he was in a hurry to get to the Far East. He was in such a hurry he took a boat—a slow boat to China."

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) told the House Hiss still has some "powerful friends" who are high officials of the Government. He named Associate Justice Felix Frankfurter and Acheson.

Hugh D. Scott, jr. (R., Pa.) noted that Acheson told a Senate committee: "Hiss is my friend, and I do not give my friendship lightly." Scott said Acheson might have added: "And wisely."

Witness Testifies Soviet Got 'Heavy Water' as Late as '45

By The Associated Press

A congressional witness testified yesterday that Russia bought "heavy water"—useful for atomic bomb research—in this country as late as February, 1945.

Another witness testified that a New York broker, Boris Pregel, arranged for the shipment of 1000 pounds of uranium salts to Russia although Pregel was allegedly "aware" of the Army's super-secret Manhattan Project for the development of the A-bomb.

Uranium is one of the key ingredients in atomic weapons.

In New York, Pregel issued a statement denouncing the testimony about himself as "not accurate" and asking a chance to be heard "as soon as possible" by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Approval Claimed

"I wish to point out," Pregel said, "That the shipment was made with the approval of the Governments of the United States and the Dominion of Canada."

Pregel is president of the Canadian Radium & Uranium Co., New York, sales agent for a Canadian uranium producing firm.

Herman Rosenberg, New York chemicals broker, told the House committee yesterday he arranged for the Russians to make two wartime purchases of heavy water and two of uranium compounds in the United States.

But Rosenberg, vice president of Chematar, Inc., insisted he had no knowledge that the materials could be used for atom bomb experiments. He said his firm complied with all Government regulations.

Rosenberg testified that at the request of the Russian purchasing commission in this country, his company arranged with the Stuart Oxygen Co. of San Francisco for the shipment of 1000 grams of heavy water to the USSR in August, 1943.

He said it was shipped on October 30 of that year.

Again in January, 1945, he said, the Russians asked for another 100 grams of heavy water. He said it was provided by the Stuart Company and was shipped to the Soviets on February 14, 1945.

Earlier in the day's testimony, Dr. Philip L. Merritt, Atomic Energy Commission official who made wartime uranium purchases for the Manhattan Project, told about the shipment of 1000 pounds of uranium compounds to Russia.

Merritt said Pregel's New York company sold the uranium to the Soviets in violation of a contract giving the U. S. Government the exclusive rights to uranium supplies handled by Pregel's firm.

Representative Nixon (R., Calif.) asked Merrittt:

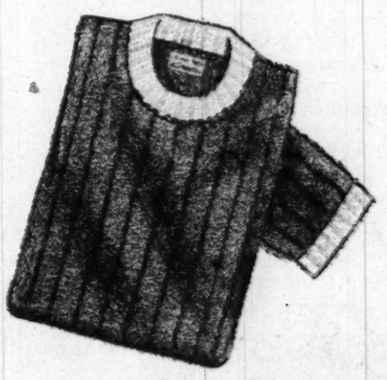

"Is there any question in your mind that Pregel knew why the Government was tying up this material?"

"He was aware of that," Merritt replied. "He (Pregel) was aware of the Manhattan Project."

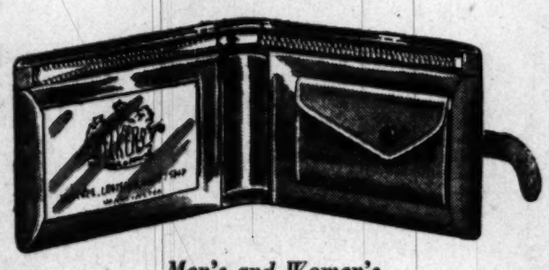

Committee aides said Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, wartime head of the Manhattan Project, may be recalled as a witness later this week.

Mollohan Confirmed

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Senate District Committee Chief Clerk Robert H. Mollohan to become United States Marshal for the Northern District of West Virginia.

Trieste Powder Keg Of Poverty, Misery

By Frank Gervasi
Post Reporter

Trieste, Jan. 24.—There may be trouble in this dangerously overcrowded catch-all of persecuted humanity known as the Anglo-American Zone of the Free Territory of Trieste.

Gervasi

There will be, that is, if some way is not found to relieve the pressures that are building up here day by day as more and more refugees drift in from Eastern and Balkan Europe and the Yugoslav Zone of the so-called Free Territory.

At least that is what Monsignor Joseph J. Harnett believes, and the big, affable, square-jawed, black-haired priest—whose work sometimes includes finding decent clothes in which to bury somebody's relative—is not given to exaggeration.

Fears the Pressures

Monsignor Harnett is the local War Relief Services representative of the National Catholic Welfare Council and something of an expert on human relations.

He is aware of the zone's unemployment problem and of the pressures generated by Communist agitation and Italo-Slav frictions here where we and the British maintain some 10,000 troops. But he is particularly aware of those generated by the refugees now and, perhaps, more dangerous ones tomorrow.

About 300,000 Italians and Slavs already are crowded into the British-American Zone, consisting of Trieste itself and a tiny enclave of surrounding barren hills and mountains, as "legal residents." There is an acute housing shortage.

In addition to the "legal residents," Monsignor Harnett estimated, there are about 25,000 refugees. Trieste occupies in relation to Communized Europe a position somewhat like that of Lisbon to the Continent in the early days of World War II. It is the new "escape hatch."

Live in Grain Silos

Some refugees live in converted, old, wooden, waterfront grain silos, one family to each walled-off and often airless, lightless room. Others are scattered about the city. Many live in the hallways and the understairs nooks and crannies of apartment dwellings.

Monsignor Harnett said:

"They are bitter. As long as they stay here, they are a threat to world peace because of their clamorings for justice an dtheir irredentist pretentions. They don't want to leave colution of their woes to the cumbersome, slow-moving machinery of the United Nations or governments.

"It's practically a guarantee of elimination of innumerable points of conflict to offer these people the possibility of a new life in a distant country."

While all represent an economic problem and add to Trieste's already acute unemployment problem—the city has about 25,000 jobless not counting refugees—Monsignor Harnett is especially concerned about the people from Venezia-Giulia.

"These are good, honest, hard-working people who would make fine God-fearing American citizens," the monsignor said. "A solution of the problem they represent lies in increasing our quota for displaced persons and redefining what a refugee is anyhow. That December, 1945, deadline ought to be changed. A lot of people have become refugees from political and religious persecution since."

One solution suggested by Monsignor Harnett was assignment of a specific quota of 25,000 to the Trieste area.

New Yorker Named To Col. Babcock's Job

Berlin, Jan. 24 (AP).—Howard P. Jones was named acting Deputy United States commissioner for Berlin today. He takes over temporarily the work of Col. W. T. Babcock, who died in the night of a heart attack.

Jones, 51, is a former Civil Service Commissioner and deputy controller on the State of New York. His Regular post is chief of the economic affairs division of the Berlin Commission.

Why Go to California for a Vacation . . . ?

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

FLOWERS THAT BLOOM IN MAY—The California Chamber of Commerce isn't going to like it, but it was warmer here yesterday than it was there. The balmy temperature—which set a record for the date—brought out the forsythia which frames Rosemarie Buzolits, 21-year-old Catholic University drama student, of 51 Victor st. ne.

73 Degrees Sets Record

month that heat records have fallen, and if yesterday had been the last day of the month, this would have been the hottest January in history, too! Mean temperature so far this month is 48 degrees, compared with the 46.8 of the record-hot January 1932.

The weather has been acting in all sorts of peculiar ways this month. Previous highs have been 69, 70, 71 and 72, and with yesterday's 73 odds were suggested on the next hot day being you guess what.

But Forecaster W. P. Day warily predicted no more than 72 for today.

The 73-degree level to which the mercury raced yesterday was only four degrees off the all-time high for the month. It was 31 degrees above the normal high for the day.

Greater Washingtonians reacted with splendid appreciation.

As one cab driver, referring to the slightly coolish spell we've had since the last 70-degree day of January 10 remarked, "Short winter, wasn't it?"

It was lazy weather, and spring fever ran high. Sightseers, sweethearts and fishermen were out wherever there were memorials, green grass or water to answer their needs.

Typical was the springtime scene around the Jefferson Memorial.

A coatless man slept, snoring, on a grass plot.

A score of fishermen snagged for winter shad or dough-baited for catfish in the Tidal Basin.

Within 5 minutes two newly-wed couples from opposite ends of the Nation visited, of all places, the memorial to the author of the Declaration of Independence.

Honeymooners Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ellison from Pensacola, Fla., said it had been colder there lately than here.

Honeymooners Mr. and Mrs. Steve Makris from New York were delighted with the weather, but Bridegroom Steve added ruefully, "Mary wanted to bring some light-weight clothes—I said she wouldn't need them."

In front of the Memorial another couple walked along the water's edge, looking at the little waves gleaming in the hot sun.

4000 yellow signs imposing the ban.

In the same breath, the Commissioners announced they plan to study the question of eliminating night parking at all times on certain streets.

The 15-year-old regulation had prohibited parking between the hours of 2 a. m. to 7 a. m. from December 15 to March 15 on heavily traveled streets. Its purpose was to allow snowplows to do a thorough job of street clearing after a night snowfall.

Called 'Experimental'

The Commissioners rescinded—rather than suspended—the regulation, but called their action "experimental." The order may be reimposed, they said, if it results in "serious traffic difficulties."

Their action was motivated, they said, by "exceptional winter weather." It was doubtless also influenced by the almost unanimous opposition expressed to the ban at a public hearing January 6.

Each of more than 25 citizens appearing at that hearing denounced the regulation. They were joined by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, Metropolitan Police superintendent, who said it seemed "an extreme penalty to the public for the good it does."

Keneipp Favored Move

George E. Keneipp, director of Vehicles and Traffic, who "reluctantly" recommends the ban each year, defended it at the start of the hearing. After listening to the opposition, he suggested lifting the ban for an experimental period.

The only steadfast defense of the ban at the hearing came from the District highway and sanitation departments, the Public Utilities Commission, and the Capital Transit Co. Their concern was with keeping traffic moving after a big storm.

Still Indefinite

The Commissioners had nothing definite to add to the statement they will study the question of prohibiting night parking at all times on some streets. But it's an old idea that has been urged from time to time by various District agencies.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young listed these as some reasons that have been advanced:

It would make easier the police job of spotting stolen cars; there would be fewer traffic injuries if persons couldn't step into the street from between parked cars; it would assure there would be no cars left parked on heavily traveled streets after the start of the morning rush.

The Motor Vehicles Parking Agency last year recommended a policy working toward eventual elimination of all night parking on public streets, General Young said.

Czechs Jail 150 Priests, Church Says

Prague, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—The Catholic Church charged today that more than 150 Catholic priests have been arrested for refusing to swear allegiance to the Communist regime.

The church spokesman declared the Communist government is trying "to destroy the Catholic Church in Czechoslovakia." He said the arrests were made on an average of one a day.

A spokesman for the government's Ministry of Church Affairs immediately denied the charge as "absolutely unfounded."

Church sources made available a statement asserting that the government is forcing priests to take the oath of loyalty.

"There is a danger that the majority of the good and faithful priests in a few months will be in prison."

German Zone Customs Duties Reported Planned by Reds

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, Jan. 24 (NYHT).—Without the dramatics of an all-out blockade, the Russians have in the past two days, managed to cripple the vital link between this city and its markets in western Germany.

The Soviet slowdown of trucks going and coming from Berlin has caused virtually all businessmen to halt export by trucks. Berlin merchants fear future truck shipments would risk either Soviet confiscation or mean a fruitless trip to check points, since almost no trucks can cross westward over the interzonal barriers.

Intelligence sources reported tonight that the East German government plans to announce customs duties between West Germany and eastern Germany. Customs barriers would create havoc in the trade lifelines which are the only hope Berlin has of ceasing to be a gigantic burden on the American taxpayer and of effecting its own economic recovery.

At the present the margin between the city's survival and its capitulation to Soviet pressure is provided by subsidies poured in by the United States.

In discussing the Communist government's stand, a high American official declared "If customs barriers are erected, they may prove one of the smartest and foxiest moves the Russians have ever made. It has the virtue of sublety. After all it would be hard to arouse the American public to the support of an airlift designed merely to overcome customs barriers."

Credit Outlook Good, Bankers Are Told

Chicago, Jan. 24 (AP).—The credit outlook is good for bankers despite an unbalanced Federal budget, they were told today.

William A. McDonnell, president of the First National Bank of St. Louis, told the national credit conference of the American Bankers Association:

"Alert bankers should be able to find a sufficient volume of sound credits to maintain reasonably satisfactory earnings on their stockholders' investments.

"Borrowers who deserve bank credit will be able to obtain it in volume ample for their needs and at attractive rates of interest.

"It is difficult, however, to be enthusiastic about a bright economic outlook which is based on prodigal federal spending and an unbalanced budget."

A. C. Simmonds, jr., president of the Bank of New York and Fifth Avenue Bank, declared that Communist fronts in labor unions, public utilities, the teaching profession and in Government are trying to destroy capitalism by "social planning."

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer said "some tax relief" would be a great stimulus to small business. Such tax cuts would aid small business "both from the standpoint of inherently strengthening the business structure and from the standpoint of inducing outside money to come in for investment," he said.

Discussing the tax problem further, Sawyer said "Here, as in most discussion of our economic problems, we are faced with a choice of disadvantages.

"Any tax relief to small business would have to be made up by other taxes, or Government expenses would have to be reduced, or the Government would be forced to operate with an added deficit."

"The loan problem (of small business) is largely one for the bankers; the tax problem is largely one for the Government."

William V. Kelly, vice president of the Pennsylvania company for banking and trusts, Philadelphia, said bankers can feel reasonably comfortable about the present situation in consumer installment debt, assuming personal incomes after taxes don't decline.

At present, he said, the ratio between the total of installment debt (what a consumer owes on his monthly payment time accounts for his refrigerator or car, for instance) and the total of personal income after taxes is about 5 percent. Before the war it was about 6½ percent.

Nourse Fears Currency Threat

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Dr. Edwin G. Nourse said today that the two-year ten billion dollar deficit now in prospect has stirred fears of inflation and possibly a "rising uncertainty as to the stability of the dollar itself."

Nourse, who was chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers until he resigned three months ago, called for a "specific and hard-headed plan of getting back to black ink."

The budget can be balanced "in a year or two," he told the Economic Club of New York, but only if the Government practices economy and reduces or defers many of President Truman's programs "in the developmental and welfare areas."

But he warned that a sudden and drastic cut in Federal spending would pull out from under business some supporters that—while "artificial and dangerous" in the long run—are currently propping up prosperity.

When the Government contracts its operations, Nourse said, businessmen must fill in the gap with "carefully considered, prompt and prudently venturesome plans" for expansion and new activity. For the Government he prescribed:

"The first order of business in this country in 1950 is to turn from the easy acceptance of deficits as a way of life to the making of a specific and hard-headed plan of getting back to black ink and a long-run program of sound debt management."

Europe Is Seen Still a Market For Fats, Oils

By the United Press

The Agriculture Department assured fats and oils exporters yesterday their sales to Europe should continue good despite the end of the acute shortage resulting from the war.

This conclusion was reached by Dr. L. J. Norton, agricultural economist of the University of Illinois, who made a first-hand study of the fats and oils market in Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Western Germany, Denmark, Italy and Czechoslovakia.

He said that while European production is picking up, these countries will make every effort to continue substantial purchases in this country "because of the basic importance of fats in their standard of living."

Brannan Asks 2 Billions More To Continue Program of CCC

By John Ball
Post Reporter

Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan yesterday asked Congress to give the Commodity Credit Corporation two billion more dollars to avoid a "run on the bank."

At present CCC has authority to borrow $4,750,000,000 to support farm prices. In other words, it has almost five billion to keep farm commodities high and farmers prosperous.

Before the 1950 crops are all harvested, Brannan said, it may need as much as $6,300,000,000. If, however, (1) the weather isn't too good, (2) the farmers don't plant too much, (3) the general public is prosperous and eats more, and (4) exports keep high, CCC may need only $5,300,000,000.

Either sum is more than CCC has. If Congress doesn't provide the two billion additional soon, Brannan said, it may cast doubt as to "the ability of CCC to carry out its obligations."

This, he warned, "could cause chaotic conditions and possible collapse of the farm price structure. Farmers would rush to place crops under price support, which would tend to increase the corporation's financial needs.

Further Consequences

"Banks would hesitate or refuse to participate as lending agencies. Processors and distributors might delay their purchases . . . in the hope of obtaining farm products more cheaply. All pressure would be toward lower prices, which would mean more price supports, not less."

Brannan declared that because the dollar is so much cheaper than it used to be, the total borrowing authority he is asking, $6,750,000,000, is really equivalent to only about $4,820,000,000 at 1945 price levels.

"The funds required to make loans on a billion bushels of corn in 1945 would cover only a little over 700 million bushels today," he said.

Brannan pointed out that farm prices have dropped 23 percent since January, 1948. "Food grains are down 32 percent," he said, "feed grains and hay 47 percent, cotton down 25 percent, oil crops 44 percent, meat animals 31 percent, dairy products 25 percent, poultry and eggs 30 percent.

Tobacco Holds Steady

"Only tobacco has held nearly steady," he said. But "prices paid by farmers have declined less than 4 percent.

"In two years," he asserted, "gross farm income has droped more than two billion dollars, and cash expenses have gone up by more than one billion." Farmers have 20 percent less money than in 1947.

The situation would be much worse, he declared, "if the Nation had not had the stabilizing influence of price supports.

"Yet the price support program can be destroyed just as quickly and effectively through the lack of adequate funds for CCC as through the repeal of our basic price support legislation."

Members of the Senate Agriculture subcommittee indicated the bill would be approved promptly. Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas, (Ill.) remarked "we don't want to delay this." Senator Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.) agreed. Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D., N. C.), who served as chairman because Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) was ill, hoped for action before the week ends.

Cominform Tried To Curb Masses, Yugoslav Charges

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 24 (AP). One of Premier Marshal Tito's top-ranking spokesmen charged today the split between the Moscow-led Cominform and Yugoslavia developed from differences which the Russians "did not dare to bring in the open."

Milovan Djilas, member of the Yugoslav Politburo and cabinet minister without portfolio, attributed the break to an attempt to "kill the initiative of the masses in our country, to stop further development of Socialist democracy here, to establish instead the real rule over the masses by monopolistic bureaucracy."

Social Security Soundness Is Questioned

A study published yesterday by the Brookings Institution "seriously questioned" the financial soundness of the social security program and Administration proposals to expand it.

The survey, which recommends "fundamental changes," said it is impossible to forecast accurately what the program will cost. But it said the figure might go as high as 46 billion dollars a year by the year 2000 "if compulsory health insurance and unemployment insurance are included."

The study was released while Alabama, Idaho, and Tennessee State officials were asking the Senate Finance Committee to expand coverage and benefits beyond limits set in a House-approved bill.

"Basic recommendations" made by Brookings' researchers, Lewis Meriam and Karl Schlotterbeck, who drew up the survey, said:

1. That the program should "provide today" for those in need now, "according to a reasonable standard based on current capacity to pay."

2. That its cost should be financed through current taxation. "Succeeding generations would be trusted to make comparable provisions for the dependents of their day," it said.

Public Welfare Commissioner Broughton Lamberth of Alabama told the Senate Committee that farm owners and workers should be covered by social security because they support the system indirectly by buying goods that are taxed to pay for it.

Bill Child, public assistance commissioner for Idaho, said exclusion of agricultural workers is discrimination and a "future threat" to the farm labor supply.

The plea was echoed by J. O. McMahon, Tennessee public welfare commissioner, who said Federal grants should go up or taxes come down because his State pays 359 million dollars in Federal taxes while receiving only 38 million dollars in benefits.

BENJAMIN FAIRLESS
Sees no "harmful effect"

the added pension costs without raising prices.

As part of the United States Steel Corp.'s testimony yesterday, it was disclosed that the company has discovered a vast iron mountain in Venezuela. It appears to be as large in tonnage as the famous Hull-Rust mine in the Mesabi range in Minnesota, and the ore is of higher iron content.

The finding was described by the company's vice president in charge of raw materials, John G. Munson. He told of plans to develop it as rapidly as possible, so that in a 30-year period it would replace the Mesabi ore source, and thus conserve America's in-shore high-grade reserves.

Earnings for Development

Munson's report was presented in part to bolster U. S. Steel's argument that it was required to devote a great part of its current earnings to modernization of plant, development and expansion.

Thus, officials declared, they could not use that money to absorb the pension costs, but had to pass them on, in higher prices, to steel consumers.

Their thesis provoked a day-long verbal battle with committee members, principally chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.). At one point he accused Fairless of "fencing" in his answers. And at all times he insisted that the corporation's "real" profits, were higher than those they listed as such. The implication was that they were high enough to have absorbed the added cost.

The company's principal argument was that the pension plan and higher tax rates for social security added almost 71 billion dollars to costs in 1949. Its price increase would be expected to yield an annual return just about offsetting this—not quite 70 billion.

Its dividend payments were almost the same amount, 73 billion. It would not be fair to wipe these out; that would be a "devastating blow" to investor confidence. Besides, stockholders "have received very inadequate returns on their investments."

The only other category from which money could have been taken would be the program to modernize and replace plant, official said.

The day's controversy centered almost entirely on this point, particularly an item of 818 million dollars. This was the company's expenditure for property additions and replacements in the last 3¾ years.

Not a Current Cost

O'Mahoney insisted that this represented a measure of earnings, and could not, at least in its entirety, be taken as a current cost. Corporation officials contended it was. At the end of the day more heat than light had been shed on the issue.

O'Mahoney's charge of "fencing" was leveled at Fairless in connection with what a fair return on sales and investments was.

Fairless, stating that his company had not earned a "fair return" in 20 years, refused to answer repeated demands from the Wyoming Senator to name what would be considered a fair return.

O'Mahoney attempted to show that the company's ratio of profits to invested capital was now at its highest level since 1929. Senator Myers (D., Pa.) pointed out its profits increased 51 percent from 1948 to 1949.

How high do profits have to go before Fairless would agree that the company was earning a fair return, Myers wanted to know.

Profits Fictitious

But Fairless, and officials who flanked him, held fast to a position which, in effect, amounted to saying that the profits were largely fictitious. This was due to an inflationary situation and consequently much higher replacement costs of their fixed, but depreciating assets.

The corporation's story of its new iron ore discovery had to do with the Cerro Bolivar Mountain, in a "vast unexplored land" in Venezuela, far up a tributary of the Orinoco River.

The problem, according to Vice President Munson, is not in the grade of the ore or the amount—probably higher and larger, respectively, than the Mesabi Range deposits—but the problem of getting it out for shipping.

Munson said the Venezuelan discovery is of "sufficient size and quantity to affect materially the iron ore supply of this country."

He said it would "conserve our natural high-grade domestic ores, thus increasing the security of this Nation and our good neighbors to the south."

The Economic Committee's hearing resumes this morning with testimony from other steel companies, beginning with Jones & Laughlin Corporation.

U. S. Funds Asked For Cotton Sales After End of ECA

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 24 (U.P.).—The National Cotton Council voted today to ask Uncle Sam to help provide Europe with the necessary dollars to buy American cotton when the Marshall Plan ends.

Read P. Dunn, jr., the council's foreign trade director, said the scarcity of dollars abroad after United States aid ends in 1952 is the biggest headache facing cotton exporters.

Many European countries want to buy now with the ECA money, he said, but have been forced to cut their purchases because of trade unbalance. Even with United States subsidy, American cotton thus has been unable to regain its prewar status abroad.

Neely Indicates 'Hands Off' in PUC Post Tussle

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) said last night he "probably will stay out" of the current jockeying for the District Public Utilities Commission vacancy.

President Truman is expected soon to send to the Senate his nomination for the $9706 municipal post where Senator Neely's District Committee will consider it.

The Commissioners are said to be backing Ralph D. Quinter, jr., of the Corporation Counsel's Office, and the Democratic Central Committee has indorsed Harold Boisvert, a law professor at National University.

Unhappy Wife Eats Pincushion's Contents

Detroit, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Mrs. Carolyn Hutchison, 19, told hospital attendants she swallowed 30 straight pins, six safety pins and eight darning needles "because my marriage didn't work."

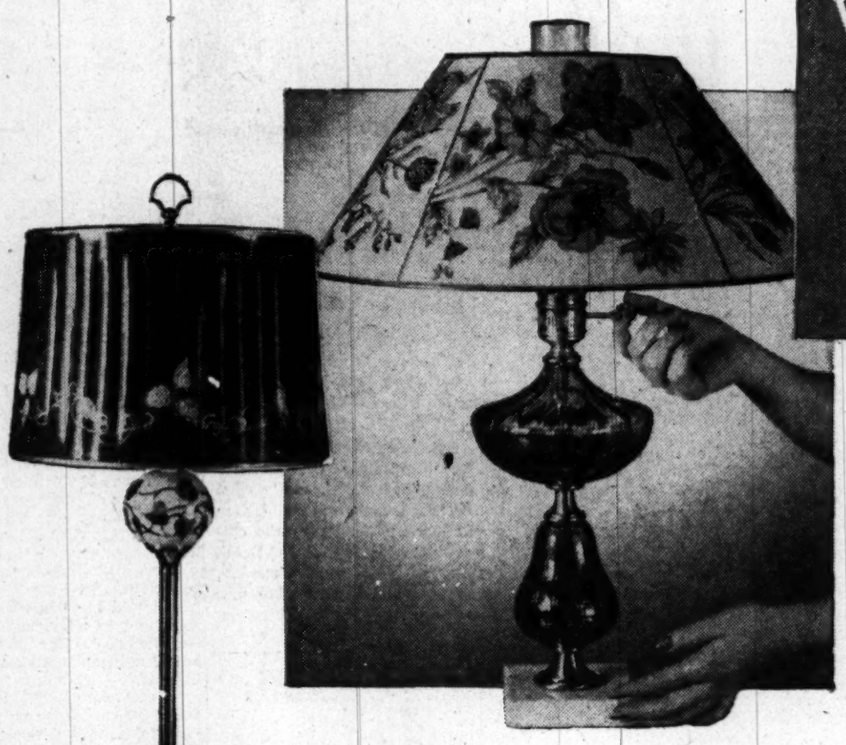

An X-ray revealed the swallowed articles and Mrs. Hutchison, mother of a 2-year-old son, was operated on immediately. She was reported in fair condition today.

Strike Today At Chrysler Still Likely

Detroit, Jan. 24 (AP).—Whether 89,000 Chrysler workers will strike Wednesday depends tonight on 50 negotiators who buckled down for an all-night session.

If they reach agreement on a pension plan or wage increase before a 10 a. m. (EST) deadline, there will be no walkout, the CIO United Auto Workers said.

Otherwise, Chrysler's 25 plants across the Nation would be shut tight.

The company has offered a plan for $100 maximum monthly pensions but it was turned down by the UAW as "unacceptable."

Government mediators, entering for the first time, declared they would try to keep the talks going steadily through the night. A wide gap was still reported between the company and union positions.

Just before the talks started, UAW President Walter Reuther sent a telegram to K. T. Keller, Chrysler president. He asked Keller to come in and bargain personally. Keller did not reply immediately.

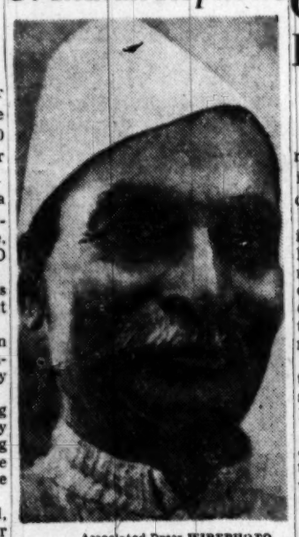

To avert a strike, the union said, Chrysler would have to agree before 10 a. m. to pay benefits worth 10 cents an hour to each worker.

The union said it was willing to take the benefits as a wage raise, pension plan and health insurance or some combination of these.

Chrysler apparently was sticking to its original proposal for a $100-a-month pension plan administered entirely by the company.

The union has demanded that such pensions be guaranteed through hourly payments for each worker by Chrysler into a special pension fund.

Three Parties To Form Cabinet, De Gasperi Says

Rome, Jan. 24 (AP).—Premier Alcide de Gasperi said tonight he will form his sixth Italian cabinet on a three-party basis. It will be an anti-Communist coalition like his previous government.

The announcement ended speculation that his Christian Democrats might try to give Italy its first one-party government since the war.

The new cabinet will include Labor Socialists and moderate left Republicans. The small Liberal (Conservative) Party has decided to stay out of the new government.

De Gasperi told newsmen he hopes to have the cabinet formed by Wednesday night.

ECA Upholds Seattle Buying

The Economic Cooperation Administration announced yesterday that the City of Seattle had not acted unfairly in turning down two British bids for electrical equipment.

William C. Foster, the acting ECA administrator, issued a statement saying ECA had been in touch with the Seattle authorities and had found nothing discriminatory in their action.

He said he was satisfied that the British bids had been rejected solely for technical reasons, and not because they would have involved the purchase of British goods.

On Monday, before leaving for Paris, Administrator Paul G. Hoffman had spent more than an hour discussing the Seattle case with his top advisers. Although ECA has no jurisdiction over an American city's purchases, Hoffman ordered direct inquiries made because of the possibly serious effects on the British export drive.

3 Steel Firms Curtail Output In Coal Crisis

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Three steel companies announced yesterday they were being squeezed by a shortage of coal.

The Crucible Steel Co. banked its No. 2 blast furnace at East Liverpool, Ohio, and laid off 500 men. The company said two more open hearth furnaces may be shut down this week if the strike continues at its Crucible, Pa., coal mines.

Republic Steel Corp. reported that the coal shortage was forcing suspension of iron making at the No. 1 blast furnace at Youngstown, Ohio. Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. also disclosed plans to reduce production at Brier Hill works in Youngstown.

Meanwhile, pickets roved through the coal fields, and persuaded 14,000 more miners to join the strike for a new contract with the operators. It is estimated that around 80,000 miners are out, despite the official request of John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers that they return to work on a three-day work week basis.

There was a report from Uniontown, Pa., that a band of pickets confiscated the lunches of miners returning to work, and ate them on the spot. The miners also changed their minds about working.

A caravan of 50 picket-filled autos swooped down on West Virginia mines still at work. Violence broke out near Clarksburg, W. Va. Picket motor cavalcades raced through central Pennsylvania.

The office of Representative Anthony Cavalcante (D., Pa.) announced that White House "intervention" was speeding up the distribution of free potatoes to hungry miners' families in Pennsylvania. Cavalcante also asked the Department of Agriculture to turn over surplus butter, eggs, canned foods, flour and pork to the destitute miners' families.

The potatoes will be turned over to the Pennsylvania State government for distribution.

On Capitol Hill, four more Republican Representatives, Ralph E. Church (Ill.), Kenneth B. Keating (N. Y.), Ben. J. Jensen (Iowa) and Earl C. Michener (Mich.), urged the president to invoked the Taft-Hartley Act in the coal dispute.

Truman Lauds Pay-Floor Law

President Truman yesterday declared that the new 75-cents-an-hour minimum wage—effective today — "adds to our economic strength."

"It is a measure dictated by social justice. It is founded on the belief that full human dignity requires at lease a mipimum level of economic sufficiency and security," Mr. Truman said.

The prime effect of the amended Fair Labor Standards Act — also known as the Wage-Hour Act—is raising a floor on wages for 22 million workers engaged in interstate commerce from 40 cents an hour to 75 cents. The new law is expected to bring wage raises of 5 to 15 cents an hour to 1,500,000 workers.

The new law also tightens the provisions against exploitation of child labor, bring 75,000 more children under protection of the act during the school year, and an additional 100,000 during the vacation periods.

President Truman said that enactment of the act in 1938 was a "great achievement" that had a "highly beneficial effect upon our entire economy," and which "helped all segments of our population." He foresaw "great and lasting benefits" from the amended law.

The CIO yesterday hailed the new minimum wage as a token of "economic liberation and advancement for millions of Americans."

Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and chairman of the CIO Minimum Wage Committee, said the new minimum of 75 cents is a "severe blow against any renewal of sweatshop practices." He reiterated the CIO's hope for a $1 minimum and universal coverage under the law."

Commission Settles Claims Against D. C.

The Commissioners yesterday agreed to settle for $2000 claims brought against the District for injuries suffered in two accidents occurring on District property.

Profiting from the action will be Stanley F. Boswell, 496 N st. sw., to the extent of $1250, and Mrs. Mary A. Kruelle, 3115 7th st. ne., $750.

Boswell, an assistant supervisor in the Labor Department, brought a claim of $25,000 against the District after he fell on an icy sidewalk near his home five years ago. He fractured his left arm and suffered a permanent disability.

Mrs. Kruelle fractured her left wrist in October, 1947, when she stepped from a car across from her home and fell into a hole in the space between curb and sidewalk.

Claims turned down were brought by Anna May Clayborn, 5207 N. Carlyn Spring rd., Arlington, who asked $90 because a particle flew into her eye last September as she was riding a bus on H st. ne., under the railroad underpass; and John B. Moore, 300 Cameron rd., Wellington, Alexandria, who wanted $201.42 for damages resulting when his car and a D. C. National Guard jeep collided in September, 1948.

High U. S. Officials Act to Save Lustron

By The Associated Press

High Government officials have intervened, it was disclosed last night, in behalf of the Lustron Corp., big prefabricated housing company threatened with foreclosure because of unpaid debts to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

They raised the issue of the corporation's potential value as a producer of housing in time of war.

David H. Stowe, administrative assistant to President Truman, told a reporter he raised the question in behalf of the National Security Resources Board.

The RFC has threatened foreclosure or receivership against Lustron, Columbus, Ohio, concern which owes the RFC $37,500,000.

The RFC withheld comment, and also withheld any move against Lustron. It announced a week ago it had instructed its legal staff to get ready for court action against the company.

In Columbus, Carl G. Strandlund, Lustron president, said the Government "would be lucky to get 5 cents on the dollar" if the RFC forecloses and offers its assets for sale.

Strandlund said his company can make a go of it if the RFC will lend five million dollars more and he can get some of the contracts for the 250,000 housing units needed by the military services.

Stowe said he got into the picture when a delegation from the National Housing Conference visited him Saturday. The conference represents veterans, labor and other organizations interested in the Administration's program to stimulate low cost housing.

Senators Are Named As Academy Visitors

Vice President Barkley named eight Senators yesterday to act as boards of visitors to armed services academies.

Senators Hill (D., Ala.), Robertson (D., Va.) and Churney (R., S. Dak.) were named to check on the Military Academy at West Point. Senators Maybank (D., S. C.), Kilgore (D., W. Va.) and Saltonstall (R., Mass.) were named to visit the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Senator McFarland (D., Ariz.) was chosen to visit the Merchant Marine Academy and Senator Myers (D. Pa.) the Coast Guard Academy.

Fresh Cabbage Juice Suggested For Peptic Ulcers

San Francisco, Jan. 13 (AP).—A remarkable speedup in the healing of peptic ulcers when treated with raw cabbage juice was reported today by Dr. Garnett Cheney of the Stanford University medical school.

In the first test of its kind on human beings, 13 patients, some with ulcers of long standing, received the cabbage juice daily. In 11 cases the ulcers disappeared in six to nine days, Dr. Cheney said. He reported the tests in California Medicine, an official journal. One case required 23 days of treatment.

The tests indicate, but do not prove, Dr. Cheney said, that raw cabbage juice contains an unidentified substance which plays "a specific role in the healing of peptic ulcers."

Pure fresh cabbage juice may be had in Washington from the Vita Food Co. at 503 12th Street, N.W., or 3040 14th Street N.W., or at the C & O Food Store, 519 11th Street, N.W., CO. 2980.

Rules Group Blocks FEPC

deep South, meanwhile became a potential bargaining weapon against a threatened Southern "sit down" on all Fair Deal measures.

House Rules Chairman Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.) yesterday was accused by Southerners of "stalling" the cotton bill for that purpose during the bitter House Rules Committee clash.

Sabath finally ordered hearings Thursday on the bill increasing cotton acreage quotas after hot and heavy exchanges with Representative John E. Lyle, jr., (D., Tex.), Representative Eugene Cox (D., Ga.) and House Agriculture Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.).

Lyle, whose south Texas constituents plant their cotton early to avoid the pink boll worm, cited reports that the cotton bill may be held up to force Southerners in line.

"I'm not going to be kicked around on FEPC," he told Sabath. "I've been shot at and hit and it don't scare me a damned bit . . . I don't go down to the White House to find out how to vote."

Cox also told Sabath, "It's perfectly obvious that this is a stall."

Later, Representative Ray J. Madden (D., Ill.) told newsmen:

"Those boys from down below (the Mason-Dixon line) want to get their bills out in half-an-hour, but every time a Truman bill comes along they want to filibuster."

Four Southern Democrats, Cox, Lyle, Howard W. Smith (Va.) and William M. Colmer (Miss.), voted with one Republican, Brown of Ohio, against sending the FEPC bill to the floor. Voting to report FEPC were Sabath, Madden, John McSweeney (D., Ohio), James J. Delaney (D., N. Y.) and one Republican, Christian A. Herter (Mass.).

Brown told newsmen he voted against approval to prevent final action on FEPC in the absence of two Republican rules committeemen, Leo E. Allen (Ill.) and James W. Wadsworth (N.Y.). Brown said he will move to bring up FEPC again at the next meeting of the committee at which all four Republicans are present. Allen and Wadsworth are expected to vote against FEPC and Brown may switch his vote from "no" to "aye." That would leave FEPC still bottled up, 6 to 6.

Hearing Set On Anacostia Bridge Site

The controversy over location of a bridge over the Anacostia River will be aired before the National Capital Park and Planning Commission Thursday and the press will be on hand to hear it.

It will be only the second time in the memory of Commission staff members that the press has been admitted to a regular session of the NCPPC. John Nolen, jr., planning director, said yesterday that the only other time he remembers was last September, when the Commission was discussing its needs for a more adequate staff.

Nolen said that for the first time since the controversy started—over whether the bridge should be located across East Capitol st. as suggested by the Highway Department, or across Massachusetts ave., as unofficially suggested by NCPPC—cost estimates will be available on the East Capitol st. proposal.

He said that Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young will report on the District Commissioners' actions concerning the bridge, the Highway Department will justify its proposal. Nolen will report on behalf of the NCPPC staff for the Massachusetts ave. proposal and a National Park Service spokesman will speak for that agency.

Nolen also indicated that plans to publish the comprehensive plan summary for the development of Washington during January have been abandoned.

Head of Park Group Confers With Truman

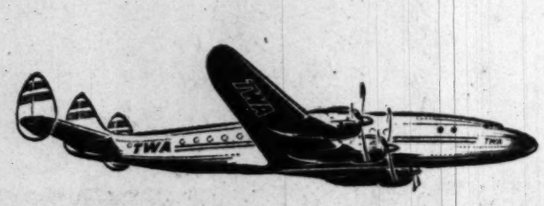

The importance of the post of chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission was emphasized to President Truman yesterday.

Dean William W. Wurster, NCPPC chairman, underlined the job's status in a conference with the President, in which he warned that the chairman should give "more time to the job than I am able to do."

Wurster later added, however, that he had not resigned from the job, nor suggested resigning to the President. "The whole thing is on a very vague plane just now," he said.

Earlier this month it was reported Wurster might resign the post when he becomes dean of the University of California School of Architecture in Berkeley, next June.

Jury Chosen For Gubitchev, Coplon Trial

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—A jury of six men and six women was chosen today to try Judith Coplon and Valentin A. Gubitchev on charges of conspiring to spy for the Russians.

Selection of the jury was completed at 4:30 p. m. (EST). It came after the defense failed in a series of eleventh-hour moves to delay the often-postponed trial.

Three alternate jurors will be picked Wednesday.

A representative of the Soviet Embassy sat at the side of the Russian engineer Gubitchev as the involved process of choosing a jury got under way.

Gubitchev, 32, faces up to 15 years in prison, if convicted. The petite, 28-year-old Miss Coplon, formerly a Justice Department analyst, could get up to 35 years.

Adjournment Plea Denied

Brooklyn-born Miss Coplon already is under sentence of 40 months to 10 years following her conviction in Washington on charges of stealing Government secrets for the Russians.

Her lawyer, Archibald Palmer, pleaded unsuccessfully today for an adjournment until her appeal from the Washington conviction is decided.

Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan, presiding at his first major case, turned down a number of other motions by Palmer and by Gubitchev's lawyer, Abraham Pomerantz, which likewise would have delayed the trial.

Both defendants calmly faced the panel of 117 prospective jurors. Gubitchev's left cheek was puffed. He received treatment during the luncheon recess for a toothache.

"Must Be Presumed Innocent"

Ryan told the talesmen that Miss Coplon and Gubitchev "must be presumed innocent" until all the evidence is in.

In groups of 12, the judge questioned those called for jury duty—had they formed an opinion? . . . Would they be prejudiced against Gubitchev because he is a Russian? . . . Did they know anybody involved in the case?

He asked, among many questions, whether the talesmen would be prejudiced by the fact—as developed in seven weeks of pretrial hearings—that the Government made extensive use of illegal wire tappng in its investigations.

Witness Curses in Denying He Recruited Bridges as Red

San Francisco, Jan. 24 (AP).—In profane language, a witness for Harry Bridges denied loudly today that he ever recruited Bridges into the Communist Party.

He was Bruce B. Jones, a Mill Valley dockworker.

A Government witness, John Schomaker, former Communist and one-time associate of Bridges in the CIO Longshore Union (which Bridges heads), had testified he and jones recruited Bridges into the party in October of 1933.

"Schomaker is a —— —— liar when he said I did," Jones shouted.

Bridges was indicted for perjury on the accusation that at his 1945 citizenship hearing he swore falsely that he was not a Communist and never had been a Communist. Two other union officials, Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, Bridges' witnesses at the naturalization hearing, were indicted for conspiracy.

Schomaker testified he was active in the waterfront union in October, 1933, that he got Bridges to become a Communist, and that he collected Communist dues from him.

Another defense witness today, James J. Ryan, personnel officer of the Palo Alto veterans' hospital, testified Schomaker was on the staff there until Oct. 30, 1933.

Jones said he joined the Communist Party in 1932, and he claimed, ceased to be active in 1939.

F. Joseph Donohue, heading the prosecution staff, said "you didn't leave because of any difference of opinion?" Jones said "no."

"You haven't any difference of opinion with the Communist Party today, have you?" the attorney pursued.

Jones flared and shouted "my opinion as an American citizen is my own damned business and I don't know whether you have any business to ask me!"

Donohue withdrew the question.

Federal Judge George B. Harris frowned when Jones used profanity.

"This is no reflection on you, Mr. Witness," the judge said, "but there is no occasion for you to use swear words here at all. This is a court of law."

Jones then apologized, saying: "I'm a longshoreman and a seaman and I feel very strongly about this."

'Expose' Cost Him U. S. Job, Man Contends in $50,000 Suit

A Jasper, Ala., auditor claimed in a suit yesterday in District Court that he was removed from his position at the General Accounting Office after he informed on fellow employes to the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Daniel C. Davidson, who said he was employed at the GAO between 1941 and 1949, asks $50,000 damages from Lindsay C. Warren, comptroller general, and T. A. Flynn and V. J. Kirby of the General Accounting Office.

He said in his suit that during his employment he discovered that "un-American," "pro-German" and "communistic" activities were being carried on in the office and reported it to his superiors, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and later to the House committee.

He said that although several employes were released, no action was taken against other persons of "questionable loyalty." Later, investigators were set on his trail, he said, because certain officials feared "for their positions and their reputations in public eyes."

Malicious and false charges were made against him, Davidson said, resulting in his removal. He said it was now impossible for him to be employed by the Government.

Why Should a Dollar's Worth of Travel Continue to Cost You $1.15?

"IS THIS TRIP NECESSARY?" you were asked in 1941, when every inch of space was needed for troops and war supplies.

To discourage travel then, a tax was added on your travel dollar, a tax that grew to 15% during the war. The Federal Government collected it through the railroads. The Government still collects it, though your travel need not be rationed now.

Today, the original purpose of this tax is as obsolete as an Air Warden's helmet. But, four years after the war's end, YOU are still paying the Government at the rate of $250,000,000 a year in travel tax.

And, of the billion and three quarters collected since 1941, over half came out of your pocket after the green light on travel went on again.

You don't have food rationing today . . . you don't have gasoline rationing today.

Yet, a very real brake is still being put on travel. On a coach trip from New York to Chicago, for example, YOU are still paying $4.61 in Federal tax.

And the same with the goods that are shipped to your home community. On every dollar you pay for freight, you pay the Government an extra 3 cents (4¢ a ton on coal). That means YOU are still paying over $300,000,000 a year—freight tax alone.

This tax should be repealed NOW. There is no longer any reason you should pay $1.15 for every dollar's worth of travel . . . $1.03 for every dollar of railroad freight.

Montgomery Takes Three Safety Steps

The Montgomery County Council yesterday took three steps which it hopes will prevent traffic accidents such as the one which critically injured 8-year-old Patricia Anne Carey on January 5.

Most important, in the eyes of the council, was the appointment of Mason A. Butcher of 6813 Riggs Manor dr., Hyattsville, as traffic engineer in the department of public works.

2 Other Actions

The other two actions were direct results of the accident in which the Carey girl was struck by an automobile at Sligo ave. and Piney Branch rd., Silver Spring, while on her way to school from her home at 8 Hilltop rd.

At the request of a delegation from the Sligo Park Hills Citizens Association, whose members live in the area where the accident occured, the council asked for the assignment of a policeman at the crossing, and moved to have a sidewalk constructed there.

Meanwhile, doctors at Washington Sanitarium said last night that Patricia Anne is improving slowly, but that no definite statement on her condition could be issued yet. The daughter of CIO Secretary Treasurer James B. Carey, the child was still unconscious 19 days after the accident.

Effective March 1

The appointment of Butcher, a traffic engineer with the Capital Transit Co., will be effective March 1. The council's request for a policeman at Sligo ave.-Piney Branch rd. intersection, during designated school hours, was sent to the commander of the Silver Spring police station, while the director of public works will receive the sidewalk request, recommended by Councilman J. Douglas Bradshaw. It would run on Piney Branch rd. from Sligo ave. to the Takoma Junior High School.

use in 1951. As a result of lower-than-expected bids on these projects, they were able to save the $1,494,000, which will be used as a top figure for the ten new projects.

Next step is to gain approval by the State Board of Education for the new projects and approval of the Board of Public Works for reallocation of the fund balance. Shugart sadi he did not know how long it would take for these steps, but anticipated no delay.

Authorization of the new projects followed publication last Sunday of the first of a series of articles in The Washington Post on crisis conditions in Prince Georges County schools. Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer, author of the article, called the county's schools "more overcrowded than any schools I visited during the war," and pointed to present evils of pupil regimentation and "wrought up, worn out and discouraged teachers" as outgrowth of the county's inability to keep up with its growth.

Shugart said yesterday he had heard "favorable comment" on Mrs. Meyer's series. He added that it had not brought about his request for the 10 additional projects, which he said had been "in the works for some time."

A second article by Mrs. Meyer on Prince Georges County will appear in The Washington Post next Sunday.

Inquiry Into D. C. Operation Of CTC Asked

Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) last night won backing of Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.), House Rules chairman, for a plan to investigate the feasibility of having the District government take over operation of the Capital Transit Co.

Klein proposed the investigation in a resolution introduced in the House. It was sent to Sabath's committee.

Sabath told reporters he feels the Klein resolution deserves consideration. He said he felt the Capital Transit Co. rates have been unfairly high, and that as far as he is concerned "we'll give it (the Klein resolution) consideration."

No Discussion Beforehand

Klein said he had not discussed the resolution beforehand with other members of the District Committee or District government officials. He said he would try to confer today with Sabath to arrange for presenting his case to the Rules Committee.

Klein, a member of the District Committee, said he had thought the resolution would go to that group first. If the House approved, the investigation would be made by a five-member subcommittee of the House District Committee.

The resolution authorizes a $25,000 fund for the inquiry.

Has Had Many Complaints

Klein, in a statement, said he had received many complaints about Capital Transit operations—directed mainly at rates, at service during "off-peak" hours, and at radio broadcasts in transit vehicles.

Rate and radio issues are before the District Public Utilities Commission. The Capital Transit Co. has asked a fare increase to 15 cents and six tokens for 80 cents, from 13 cents or three tokens for 35 cents.

Klein said, "I am not prepared at this time to advocate the immediate purchase and operation of the Capital Transit Co. by the government of the District, but I certainly think the idea deserves careful and impartial study."

The proposed investigation would cover "the feasibility and advisability of the purchase and operation of all physical properties and of all assets, tangible and intangible, of the Capital Transit Co. by the government of the District."

The subcommittee would report not later than May 30, 1950.

Patronage, Revenue Cuts Seen in CTC Fare Boosts

operations were losing $654,537 a year and the recent arbitration award will increase this to $713,426 a year. He warned that this situation would "impair the ability to render adequate service in Maryland—and on the entire system."

The company now has a petition pending before the District Public Utilities Commission asking for a rate boost on cash and token fares and elimination of the weekly pass.

Maryland People's Counsel Philip H. Dorsey said CTC operations in the Free State area adjoining Washington have "reached the law of diminishing returns," with higher rates reducing patronage and thus leaving the company with less in the end than it had before rates were raised.

Laid to Labor Increase

Dorsey argued that the company had a $472,000 annual deficit before it was granted a rate increase 18 months ago. "Now the deficit is $654,000 even before the arbitration cost is added," he pointed out. Company officials said this was due, not to lower passenger revenues, but to a labor increase granted since the previous rate hike and before the current arbitration award.

The people's counsel, in his closing argument, cited the case of the Market Street Railway Co., San Francisco, Calif., in which the Supreme Court held:

"A return based upon the salvage value of a utility is proper where the utility, due to the forces of competition and adverse economic conditions has lost all value except salvage, even though such salvage may be only the value of its property when sold for salvage."

Dorsey said the CTC in Maryland had reached this point and rates should be set on this basis.

Rates Called Discriminatory

The president of the Prince Georges County Civic Federation, Walter F. Mulligan, of Berwyn, joined with Dorsey in his views, declaring that as things are going now, the CTC will "logically reach the point where there wouldn't be any revenues or any passengers."

He argued, too, that rates are discriminatory in that a District rider may travel up to 14 miles for a proposed cash rate of 15 cents, while a Prince Georges traveler would pay 35 cents for half this distance under proposed rates there.

P. Frederick Dryer, 3911 Madison st., Hyattsville, speaking for 40 residents there, asked the commission to delay new rates until "a complete rerouting of buses can be worked out to take care of the many new neighborhoods" in Prince Georges.

Leo J. Richards, 6410 Ridge dr., Brookmont, on behalf of the Civic League of Brookmont and vicinity, also counseled delay, asking that the Commission wait until the recently announced Senate investigation of utilities is completed and the 1949 annual financial report of CTC is released.

Others opposing the fare increase were Steve L. Comings, member of the Greenbelt Town Council, who said if new D. C. and Maryland fares are adopted it will cost townspeople $1.15 for a round trip to Washington.

Winter Of Discontent

"It is folly," observed a philosophically inclined gentleman of our acquaintance not long ago, "to say there are no class distinctions in the modern world. There is at least one profound distinction which is expressed in diametrically different attitudes toward the seasons. The rich make a point of shivering in the summer and sweating in the winter, whereas the poor, who are the most conservative element in any society, preserve the traditional behavior in these matters."

Asked to elaborate this interesting but somewhat mystifying assertion, our friend replied: "It is perfectly simple. At the approach of winter the rich hasten to tropical or quasi-tropical places like Egypt or Capri or Florida or Bermuda for the boating and swimming. At the approach of summer they hurry off to the Far North for the skiing and the skating, and so on. The poor stay home and take the weather as it comes. But if you work it out around the year on the basis of mean temperatures, you'll find it amounts to pretty much the same thing."

When we telephoned our friend yesterday to ask how he fitted the present remarkable weather into his theory, we discovered that he had left some weeks ago for California and wasn't expected back until spring. So we are left to wrestle unaided with the question whether there is any advantage in being in Florida rather than in Washington at this time, beyond the certification that one can afford the ticket, the time off and the hotel rates. If not, then these seasonal migrations of the leisure class may seem to be largely for the purpose of what the late Prof. Thorstein Veblen called "conspicuous waste." It was 73 degrees here yesterday, which seems to us about as warm as anybody could ask for purely physiological reasons. And we dare say today's paper will be full of photographs of young ladies who reverted for comfort to sarongs or two-piece Deauville bathing suits and went wading in Rock Creek Park for seasonable exercise. And, with all due respect to those ingenious Florida publicity men, that is as much as anybody could desire for purely esthetic reasons.

It was, as you have probably read elsewhere, the warmest January 24 in the records of the local weather bureau, and the fifth time this month that new records have been set. Indeed, it was within a few degrees of being the warmest January day in the meteorological history of these latitudes. And despite a few sudden and ephemeral cold spells, this will very likely prove to have been the warmest January of them all.

But if for any reason you feel that your social status is being impaired by remaining in Washington at this unseasonable season—if you feel that the once fashionable sport of sweating out a tropical winter has become vulgarized like canasta or existentialist philosophy—there's no good in just sitting under an electric fan in a loin clout or a pair of beach pajamas cursing the Fair Deal and the egalitarian tendencies of the times. Pick up the telephone, get yourself reservations to Great Falls, Mont., where the temperature yesterday was 24 below zero. And when our friend returns from California we shall be able to inform him that his principle of class distinctions has been reversed.

Trial Balloon

Representative Williams of Mississippi has introduced a bill to forbid Federal employment of any husband and wife if one of them earns over $5000 or if their combined pay is over $7500. The bill, he said, is "a trial balloon to see what the reaction is among Government workers and others." Our own reaction is that we hope the balloon will pop speedily if it has not done so already.

Mr. Williams may consider us old-fashioned, but we think very highly of marriage as an institution and we see no reason why Government employes should be penalized for marrying. Some very respectable people are married, as indeed their parents were before them; and they are none the less able to perform creditable work in the civil service on that account. The Federal Government is a very big employer with a great many branch offices. And we do not see what harm can flow from the employment of a husband in one agency while his wife is at work in another.

Prohibitions such as that suggested by Mr. Williams may make some sense when directed at nepotism—that is, the hiring of persons on account of kinship rather than on grounds of merit. Thus we can see that Mr. Williams' bill might have some useful application to the employment practice of members of Congress so far as their personal staffs are concerned. At any rate, if Mr. Williams likes to hear the sound of balloons bursting in air, he might well give a thought to floating that one on trial.

Congress Can Act

The American note to Bulgaria insisting upon the withdrawal of a note asking for the recall of the American Minister reveals a condition of things which is well-nigh intolerable. Bulgar employes in the legation are subject to constant persecution. Two have been executed, another died after maltreatment by the police, others have been arrested and tortured. No charge seems to have been brought against them except that they were associated with the American Legation. American officials are simply hamstrung. Entry and movement are subjected to such restrictions that it is "virtually impossible for the legation to perform its normal diplomatic and consular functions."

The American note says that if the Bulgar note is not withdrawn the United States will recall its own diplomatic mission from Bulgaria. The carrying out of that threat would mean a rupture of relations. This the United States is anxious to avoid, for the Soviet aim seems to be to isolate all its creature states from American contact, and Moscow would think of a diplomatic break as a victory in the cold war. Moreover, the United States does not want to seem to desert the Bulgarian people. That is why the United States has been following a policy of forbearance—a policy that should have no limits so long as convenience is served. The question has now arisen whether the maintenance of relations with Bulgaria—indeed, with Romania and Hungary—fulfills any purpose whatsoever save as an invitation to humiliation.

The exchange with Bulgaria affords further evidence that the peace treaties with the satellite countries have become scraps of paper. Violations have piled up at the doors of Romania and Hungary as well as of Bulgaria. These three nations pledged themselves, for instance, to secure "the enjoyment of human rights and of the fundamental freedoms, including freedom of expression, of press and publication, of religious worship, of political opinion and of public meeting." The pledge was scarcely dry on the treaties when the Balkan signatories started to rub out oppositionists, notably Nikola Petkov of Bulgaria. Moscow, of course, instigated the violations. It was part and parcel of the Russification program, and this is now complete, the three nations having lost their identities and become Russian provinces. The latest sign was the Red army's absorption of the military under one general staff and the assumption of control of the various military establishments by Russian generals.

To let this uncivilized behavior go unchallenged would be to imperil the foundation of international relations. Is it not time for Congress to take cognizance of the sorry state of these particular treaties and by concurrent resolution declare them null and void? In this matter Congress, as the ratifying agent, can act—as it couldn't act when the executive agreements at Yalta and Cairo were turned into frustrated contracts by Soviet seizures in Manchuria and by Chinese misrule in Formosa. It is a thousand pities that the Executive two years ago did not use these infringements of contracts to recover freedom of action in the Far East. In the present case, treaties are involved; and Congress need not wait upon the Executive.

In taking action, Congress would be performing a valuable function apart from freeing the Executive's hands. It would be calling the world's and the Balkan people's attention to its own revulsion from Muscovite amorality in respect of treaty-making. Broken treaties have a habit, like a sort of Gresham's law, of depreciating the significance of all treaties. Congress, in upholding the principle of the inviolability of signed and sealed compacts, would thus be striking a stout blow for the basic principle in international relations. Such a blow would echo through the long black night in which these Balkan countries are shrouded. It might not evoke an immediate response in Bulgaria, but there would be an echo from the spirit of Nikola Petkov as he sleeps fitfully in his lonely grave in Sofia, and the reaction there would be recognized as the voice of authentic Bulgaria.

Budget For The People

The average man and woman is confused by the mass of detailed information and the technical language of the budget transmitted to Congress by the President. The very appearance of this unwieldy document frightens the seeker after knowledge and causes him to turn away. Consequently, the Federal Budget In Brief, a handy booklet prepared by the Budget Bureau, is an answer to the prayers of many Americans for a simplified presentation of the sources of the Federal Government's income and the purposes for which it is used.

The classification of expenditures according to broad purposes or functions adds immeasurably to the value of this simplified budget. For instance, the reader is told what the cost of defense is expected to be in the next fiscal year, what the Government proposes to spend for housing, for social welfare, for development of natural resources, for general government and so forth. These summarized statements of expenditures are broken down into a few subclassifications, with accompanying charts showing where the money goes and graphic illustrations of total and estimated expenditures for major activities over a period of years.

Truly the Budget Bureau has done an excellent job, avoiding the kind of oversimplification that would mislead while omitting details that would confuse the man in the street. It is difficult for the bureau to avoid giving an impression of partisanship when setting forth the purposes of spending programs and explaining why Government costs are so high. No doubt some critics will find evidence of a pro-Administration bias in references to the President's laudable reasons for recommending certain spending projects. But the budget is, after all, much more than facts and figures. As President Truman says, it represents the program that he has recommended to Congress for the months ahead. The public should know the reasons for his recommendations, sound or otherwise, in order to gain a better understanding of the Administration's policies and their effect on Government finances.

Broader Hatch Act

Senate approval of an amendment to the Hatch Act permitting Government employes to take part in local political party activity is by no means an argument against nonpartisan elections. It is obvious that some of the support of the amendment, at least from the Virginia delegation, arose from fear of the spread of the nonpartisan movement. To our mind that trend in municipal affairs is something to be encouraged.

Primarily the amendment affects residents of nearby Maryland and Virginia. In adjacent counties to the District, where 10 percent or more of the qualified voters are Federal or District employes, the ban against party activity would be lifted to permit them to become candidates or managers. The same rule would apply in other counties over the country where a majority of the voters are Federal employes. Provided that the Civil Service Commission maintains an adequate check against abuse, this is a reasonable means of encouraging the interest of Federal employes in good local government.

In Virginia the participation of Government employes in nonpartisan contests has been increasing—witness the advisory referendum on Alexandria City Council elections, the nonpartisan Arlington School Board and the fact that a majority of the five-man Arlington County Board is now nonpartisan. Here the amendment undoubtedly is viewed by old-line Democratic organizations as a means of checking the nonpartisan swing. For in a one-party State where Republican efforts have been largely ineffectual, the nonpartisan movement often constitutes the real opposition. Virginia voters will have to be at pains to see that the amendment does not become a vehicle for further entrenching one-party control.

Other amendments to lessen Hatch Act penalties against unintentional violators conform to those already passed by the House. There are degrees of offenses, and the mandatory discharge required at present has come to be recognized as too harsh a penalty to cover all cases. The provision for a minimum penalty of 60 days suspension without pay should permit the Civil Service Commission necessary flexibility of action. At the same time the requirement of periodic reports to Congress should insure that the essential safeguards of the Hatch Act will be preserved.

Action On Parking

Engineer Commissioner Young's pointed remarks about the need for more parking facilities should be a prod to the business community. General Young chided businessmen for not getting together on a comprehensive plan to relieve parking congestion. "We want private enterprise to do it," he said, "but we can't wait forever. We (meaning the District Commissioners) may be forced to act." The recognition that the Commissioners have it within their power to act in this field is important, and it may be the sort of stick that is necessary.

Washington's parking problem is twofold: to accommodate shoppers and to provide for all-day parkers. The latter need is, in our opinion, more urgent. Progress has been made in providing more downtown garages, but the need is to dissuade all-day parkers from using the downtown area. Every person who parks his car downtown all day preempts space that might be used by several shoppers. Readily accessible and well-advertised low-cost fringe parking lots, outside the downtown district but tied to it by fast public transportation, are fundamental to this program.

It is unreasonable to expect private enterprise to undertake such fringe lots, which are of questionable profitability, without some help. Here is where the businessmen come in. Merchants in other cities have found it worth their while to underwrite such operations, and the small outlays involved are usually more than made up by good will and the stimulus to sales. Assuredly as parking congestion increases, trade will suffer. Thus in their own interest members of the Board of Trade ought to be actively considering a positive program. The best plan would, of course, be cooperative, with the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency and the Commissioners assisting business groups to acquire land. But cooperation should not mean more delay or inaction, for the parking problem is getting no better fast.

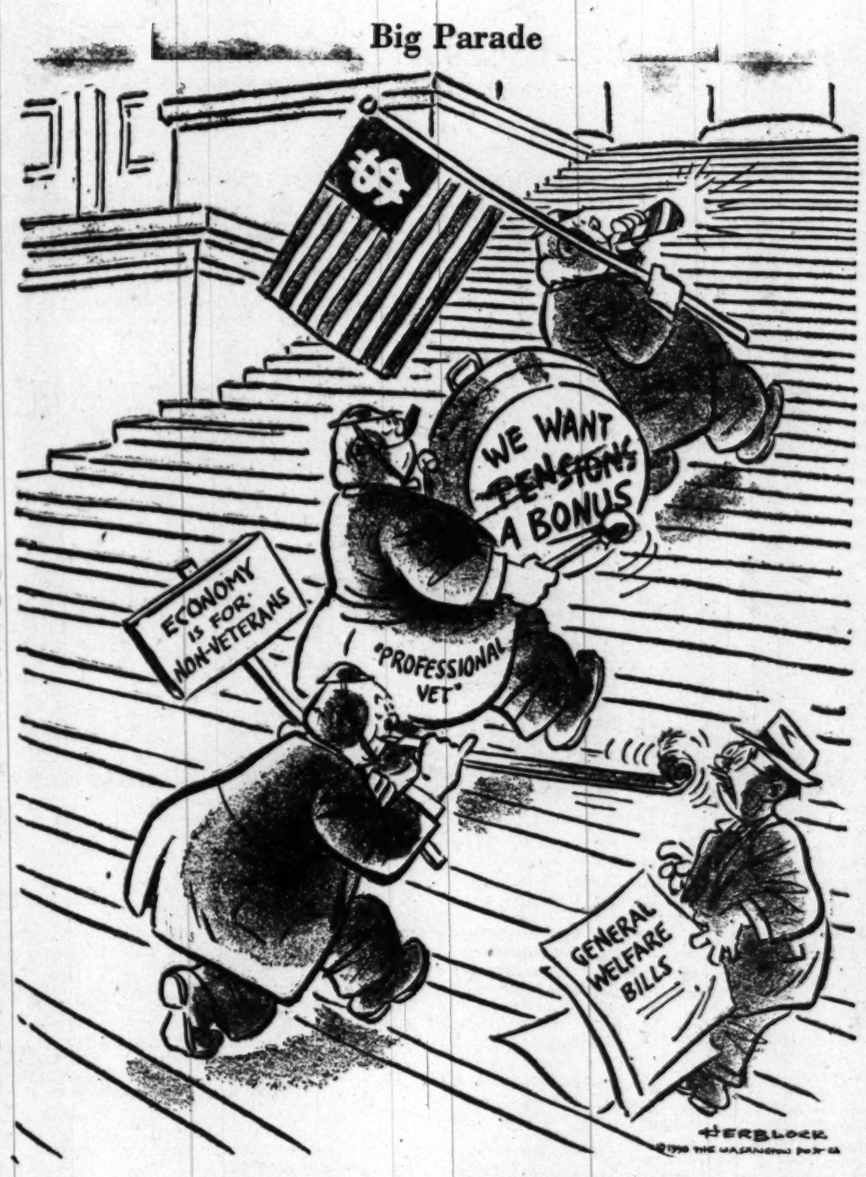

DAWN

Deep are the waters of the world
And the heavens high;
High as the upthrust wing of a bird.

Who has seen the day
Come out of the ocean,
Dropping spray
From lifted hand and shoulder?

Tell then—
Out of these doorways
Lintels of steel and granite,
Passes what new-born heart
And what delight.

"Congressional Record"

Everywhere one reads and hears that this is an economy-minded Congress. As evidence that preaching economy is one thing and practicing it quite another suppose we take a look at the Congressional Record.

In the first 12 issues of the Record, January 3 to 18, inclusive of its appendix—that catch-all for random resolutions, newspaper clippings, extracurricular speeches, sermons and favorite poems—ran to 408 pages. At the Public Printer's estimate of $82 a page that represents an expenditure of $33,456, or $2788 per issue, to say nothing of subsequent expenditures for reprints, franking, etc.

In these first 12 issues Senator Humphrey (Minnesota) has used 77¾ columns of space (at a cost of $2125) largely for the reprinting of newspaper editorials, magazine articles and other reading matter which has interested him. At the same time Representative Lane (Massachusetts) utilized 37 columns (costing $1011) the majority of which were given over to the enshrinement of his own extracurricular speeches and radio talks delivered in his own home congressional district.

If every Senator and every Representative used the columns of the appendix with the same exuberance as Senator Humphrey and Representative Lane—and there doesn't seem to be any reason why they couldn't if they wanted to—the appendix would average 654 pages daily at a cost of $53,600 per issue, a thought almost too horrible to contemplate from either a fiscal or a literary standpoint.

It is interesting to note, also, that these same 12 issues contained 35 items (editorials, columns and articles) culled from Washington newspapers—a mere matter of 20½ pages costing $1680. These items are generally introduced with the comment of the sponsoring legislator that he is making the insertion for the enlightenment and edification of his colleagues.

If that is the sole, or even the prime, object, it seems curious that it has never occurred to anyone that a copy of each of the 35 different issues could be placed on the desk of every Senator and every Representative at barely half the cost of reproduction in the Congressional Record.

Enforcing Civil Rights

It is very plain that President Truman is determined to have his new program of civil rights enacted if he can. Before the President takes up the duties of office, he must take the following oath: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Section 2 of the Fourteenth Amendment reads as follows: "Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such state, being 21 years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens in such State."

If this section were literally and impartially enforced it would probably secure substantially what Mr. Truman advocates.

Draft Extension

The Senate Military Affairs Committee is starting its hearings on the extension of the existing draft legislation. Any new draft law must not repeat the present law, but should change to make the burden of the draft as equitable as possible.

The present service period of 21 months is much too long. Most nations demand only 11 months. A year's training certainly represents the needed maximum. Otherwise the burden falls far too heavily on a small number of draftees. Last fall the Army decided to release its draftees after 12 months' service.

The actual draft should be confined, as it is in other countries, to young men between 19 and 21. It is unfair to the individual, and harmful to national security. Younger men would suffer less, especially if they were asked to serve not longer than one year and would receive after their service educational privileges similar to those being enjoyed by the veterans.

"Transit Neuroses"

In re James R. Burton's January 22 letter about transit radio I think a few comments are required:

1. The letter sounds like merely another example of the trend becoming more and more popular in this country, of labeling as "neurotic" any kind of behavior which does not conform to the labeler's own standards. It is, after all, reasonably possible that the music played on transit radio is very bad music, and the commercials in very bad taste; to believe this does not make anyone neurotic.

2. The issues at stake in the transit radio controversy are much more important than transit radio itself. It is not beyond the realm of the possible that the invasion of public places by radio propaganda sweetened (sic) with music, for the economic gain of private interests, will become general; it is not fantastic to imagine the techniques taken up by some future Government and used as Hitler used them.

3. Should that ever happen, the fatuousness of Mr. Burton's notion—that one "may select what he desires to hear, and . . . reject what he does not wish to hear"—will be demonstrated only too poignantly. As it happens, very few people are able to exercise such strength of will: as it happens, too, most people do not care to do so because they like transit radio. But the real implications of the issue have nothing to do with their liking or disliking it, but rather with the kind of weapon of thought control, whether used by private groups or by the state itself, that public and inescapable radio can so easily become.

Program For Formosa Aid

There has been so much talk and countertalk over Formosa that the time has come to clear away recriminations, stop postmortems and come down to earth with a program that is feasible and fits in with prospective American responsibilities in the Orient.

General MacArthur is not a military amateur. He favors the retention of Formosa. This I know from conversations with him as recently as last August. His opinion is shared by some top admirals with years of experience in the Orient.

Formosa and Hainan are political assets in the Far East, just as Berlin is in Europe. We are fighting a cold war in the Orient, and we shall be fighting one there indefinitely—as long as we maintain political interest in Japan, the Philippines and Indonesia.

If we set an example of abdication in a situation involving those friendly Chinese left in Hainan and Formosa, that precedent can reverberate against our policy in Europe. It will resemble another Munich in that it will merely postpone an evil day.

Formosa, and possibly Hainan, can be kept in friendly hands by giving relatively inexpensive help in the form of oil, ammunition, ship repairs and supplies to the present Chinese Nationalist navy and air force. I have been told by men of unquestioned military competence that such help can be effective. No American troops need be landed.

The next point that needs better realization is that we have had forced upon us an historic job of maintaining peace in the world. Our present work in Europe, the Mediterranean, Turkey and the Persian Gulf area, as well as in the Orient, is proof of that.

We cannot, and should not, attempt to keep mobilized sufficient aircraft, naval ships, manpower and supplies to perform such tasks in perfect safety. We can profit from Great Britain's example during the nineteenth century. She had the will, during 100 years, to use a little power at the right time and place to maintain peace.

We are almost unconsciously developing that technique. The airlift to Berlin was a classic example. The maintenance of our division of B-29's in Britain is another. The building of B-36's is another. Carrier-borne air power, with its ability to go anywhere upon the high seas, is still another.

All of this represents not only American political influence throughout the world, but the political might and power of the American Nation. We are policemen patrolling beats.

This police work has been thrust upon us. We shall have to continue doing it. Where we have dared to use a little of it with a will, such as at Berlin, in Italy, Iran, Turkey and Greece, the results have been surprisingly good.

Formosa and Hainan present a classic opportunity to test the presence of modern naval power in the form of carrier-borne planes and supporting ships to maintain our political position. Couple their presence with materiel help to the Chinese Nationalist navy and air force, and we can reasonably expect encouraging results. It can help to revive the self-confidence of Chinese friendly to us. Once they see what they can do with the proper use of their own naval and air power, they may have more assurance in helping themselves. Our presence would add to their prestige and thus encourage the possibilities of a gradual regeneration of the Chinese people in at least a part of China.

'Hate America' Campaign

By Malvina Lindsay

What Defense?

THE "HATE AMERICA" crusade, now being extended by Communist propagandists from Europe to China, borrows many features from the pattern set by Dr. Goebbels. People of the United States are represented as trivial, empty-headed, vulgar, materialistic, weak, self-indulgent. They have no culture, hang passively over radios and comic books. The women are decadent, painted robots, or (and here Soviet propaganda does a Tito) they are factory or kitchen slaves. Soviet digression from the Nazi abuse pattern also accuses Americans of racism, militarism, mysticism.

In today's small world it seems incredible that Nazi propaganda about Americans should have taken hold in a nation so exposed to the world as Germany. Yet Miss Margaret Sorenson, adviser in the German Youth Activities Program conducted by the United States Army in Germany, tells of how deeply such ideas were rooted in the young people who come to youth centers.

However, as these boys and girls have come in contact with Americans, learned American procedures in group activities, their ideas have changed. German curiosity about Americans, especially American women, is tremendous, Miss Sorenson reports, and Americans in Germany find themselves serving as measuring sticks by which Nazi conceptions are tested.

A STUDY, European Beliefs Regarding the United States, made by the Common Council for American Unity, reveals that many Europeans think Americans are too materialistic, that American policy is determined by big business, that its foreign policy is unstable, that the Marshall Plan is solely a political weapon against Russia, that the Nation is largely composed of gangsters, sadists, pin-up girls, and cowboys.

However, this study also showed much favorable reaction to the United States. In ERP countries three out of four persons thought the Soviet was trying to dominate Europe.

But it is in the countries cut off from the rest of the world, as China, that the "hate America" campaign can best be carried on. The first step in this is to replace the past conception of the slaphappy, generous American with that of a scheming money-mad imperialist.

In China especially there has been strong traditional friendship for Americans, but propaganda can work rapidly among the unlettered and oppressed. As demagogues long ago discovered, it is much easier to arouse people against something than for it.

What defense is there against this insidious, powerful weapon of hate? Is it to build bigger and deadlier hate bombs? But that would only shorten the road to war. And it would prove the weakest long-run strategy in view of what science tells us about the poisonous and self-destroying nature of hate emotions.

WHILE our Government rushes to build more powerful weapons than the Kremlin, it yet retreats in the face of hate weapons and proposes to cut down our overseas information program, including the Voice of America, by setting a budget ceiling 61 percent below the program's needs. And most educational and cultural activities we carry on in foreign countries, such as the youth centers in Germany, which are making convincing rebuttals to hate propaganda, struggle along on shoestring finances.

One of the quickest, most far-reaching ways of combating hostile propaganda about the United States is to bring foreign leaders and students to this country. These cannot come now from countries under Communist domination. But at last reports Western educators and missionaries still had a foothold in Communist China. If they can retain this, they should be reinforced in every way possible.

Also Americans should strive more for exchange of ideas and persons with such countries, as those in southeast Asia, where we still have a chance to forestall hate propaganda. In fact, many cracks through which we could show our faces, rather than our mailed fists, could be found in iron curtains around the world if we would look hard enough for them.

Old Schools

We seem to stand aghast at terrible school fires elsewhere. But do we recognize a similar menace facing us in our own back yard? We have just such a building in Falls Church—it was erected in 1870, as I understand, to be used as a soap factory. Years later it was used as a hospital. It is now the annex to Jefferson School for the lower grades.

The fourth grade is located on the top floor and very crowded with no desks or other conveniences. The fire escape on one side was so dilapidated last fall they built a wooden one. The stairway inside is very dark and has pulled away from the walls so far that one standing on steps of the top floor can look down the wall into the basement. This would be a natural flue for any blaze.

These historical old buildings may be the seat of culture but are a death trap for our loved ones.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Instrument Of Mass Destruction

SOMETHING very like a strike by many of the scientists who would be expected to plan and design the hydrogen bomb is more than a possibility. It is a probability and, therefore, it is one of the factors that must be seriously weighed.

Childs

This would not be an organized movement. It would represent the deep conviction of many men of conscience who could not bring themselves to contribute to an instrument of mass destruction on a scale threatening the very existence of the human race. In private discussions in laboratories and on campuses around the country this view is being expressed.

Atomic fission of uranium has tremendous potential peacetime uses. But there is no foreseeable use for the fission of hydrogen except in a military weapon and that weapon is said to have the power to decimate and destroy everything in an area of 50 to 100 square miles.

It is this that underlies the doubts and fears troubling many scientists. With uranium fission they could always believe that a vast storehouse of energy would ultimately be available in peacetime at a fraction of the cost of present power sources. But now nearly five years have passed since the first atomic explosion and the problems of the peacetime use of atomic energy are far from solved. An atomic arms race is on. Bombs now in production are far more powerful than the one dropped on Hiroshima and serious consideration is being given to a weapon that may mean final and ultimate destruction.

IN ORDER to use uranium fission for peacetime power, the destructive rays must be rendered harmless by some form of containment. If it takes 10 sheets of lead to contain the rays of uranium fission, it would take a thousand for hydrogen fission.

That is oversimplification to the point of absurdity. But it illustrates why scientists cannot foresee anything but a destructive use for the proposed development.

Whether the cost is two billion dollars or a tenth of that, 200 million dollars, is, in the scientist's frame of reference, irrelevant. He rebels at being harnessed to a machine that could have as its only goal the destruction of millions of human beings in a mass slaughter that would make large areas of the earth uninhabitable.

Some scientists — and some military men — seriously doubt the value of a hydrogen bomb as a military weapon. Russian industry has been dispersed to a degree little appreciated in this country where any suggested removal from an "exposed" area to a "safe" area is immediately resisted by chambers of commerce and politicians.

A weapon built at such great cost in money and resources could have only two or three justifiable targets. No concentration of industry, communications and transportation remotely comparable to New York, Pittsburgh or Detroit exists in the Soviet Union.

ON THE subject of the advances of Soviet industry and its successful dispersal there is sobering testimony in a recently published book. It is Soviet Arms and Soviet Power (Infantry Journal Press), by Gen. Augustin Guillaume, who was French military attache in Moscow from 1946 through 1948. Our own Ambassador to Moscow for three years, Lieut. Gen. Bedell Smith, has written a foreword in which he says that Guillaume's "reasoning and conclusions are sound and merit the most careful attention."

Perhaps the most frightening thing about the whole business is the way in which it is taking place in a kind of stratosphere above and beyond the American people. All we get is, on the one hand, Buck Rogers speculation, and, on the other hand, hysterical alarmism on the radio from those whose ignorance rivals their determination to create a cheap sensation.

The developing veil of secrecy around the whole atomic energy project has been the product of small and frightened minds. Men of larger courage with faith in the processes of democracy have urged repeatedly that the public be given more of the truth.

It is not surprising that so many Americans seem to feel a kind of helplessness and bewilderment. They have a sense that their destiny is being determined once and for all and yet they are powerless to do anything about it. If the decision to develop the hydrogen bomb is now taken behind the existing curtain of secrecy, then this sense of having lost the rights of free men in a free society will seem to be justified.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Truman And The Republicans

THE SPECTACLE of the plight of the Republicans must contribute considerably to President Truman's present happy mood. All the signs of the congressional session in fact suggest that the Republican Party is going into the crucial 1950 election more, not less, divided, more, not less, uncertain, more, not less, defensive-minded.

The real significance of the recent vote on the House rules, for example, lay in its revelation of an almost unprecedented split in Republican ranks. Nothing could be more unimaginative or less appealing than the leadership of the House Republicans by the Martin-Brown-Halleck-Allen junta. Hitherto, however, Representative Joseph W. Martin and his lieutenants have always been able to keep almost all their cohorts strictly in line.

Last week, they joined the Southern Democrats in the attempt to restore the former powers of the House Rules Committee. As they very frankly declared on the floor, their purpose was to spare members the political temptation to vote for welfare legislation. A revolt against them was immediately organized. The Fair Employment Practices Act was used by the Administration as a sort of club to break the power of the Republican leadership. Sixty-odd Republican members, fearful of the Negro voters in their districts, took their stand with the Northern Democrats. The plan of the Southerners and Republican conservatives was quickly smashed.

THIS WAS essentially a public declaration by this large group of once-obedient House Republicans that they had given up hope of winning by sticking to Republican orthodoxy. On any issue with strong popular appeal the President will have the same power to make the Republicans break ranks.

On the other hand, the power of Republican orthodoxy is still sufficient to paralyze the party and prevent it from taking a constructive line of its own. In the House, the Representatives who voted against the Martin leadership are being subjected to a campaign of intimidation by large contributors back home, who have been stirred up to telephone protests against "me-too-ism."

In the Senate, although no single action could so upset the Truman strategy as passing the FEPC, the Republican leadership will probably not be able to muster enough votes for cloture. And this is because the business contributors dislike the FEPC almost as much as the Southerners.

Men like Senators Ives of New York and Lodge of Massachusetts are working overtime to persuade all their colleagues to help break the expected Southern filibuster. Several Senators, like Taft of Ohio and Hickenlooper of Iowa, will vote for cloture while opposing the bill itself. Yet it is generally expected that cloture will not be voted; the Southerners will win again; and Truman will be able to pin a good part of the blame on the Republicans. The state of frustration that this sort of thing induces in the wiser Republican leaders has to be seen to be believed.

Yet they cannot escape from their dilemma; it confronts them everywhere. At the moment, for instance, Republican National Chairman Guy George Gabrielson is busily working on his famous statement of Republican principles, which is frankly intended to make the fat cats loosen up. The Gabrielson drafting group has already roughed out a statement that would cause every American voter with less than $10,000 a year to support the Democrats in every election for another decade.

THE PARALLEL House and Senate drafting groups are meanwhile wrangling about the best way to please the contributors without alienating all the rest of the electorate. It is already clear that the adoption of a highly conservative statement, such as might help Gabrielson in his task of money-raising, will cause Lodge and Ives, Morse of Oregon, Aiken of Vermont and the others like them to leave the reservation. The choice, in short, is between an open split and saying nothing.

All this is very nice for President Truman. The trouble is that the same situation which gives the President such wonderful political openings in domestic politics works in reverse in the sphere of foreign and defense policy. This was shown by the peevish, frivolously irresponsible House vote on the Korean aid bill. The right-wing Republicans and Southern Democrats, infuriated by the injection of civil rights into the Rules Committee issue, tried to get their own back by taking a hack at foreign spending. It was an instinctive, unreasoning reaction.

This same reaction is strong, moreover, in the Senate, where the right-wing Republican and Southern Democratic members of the all-powerful Appropriations Committee are joined in a squalid little plot to destroy the European Recovery Program. Altogether, the Republican aim seems to be to make the worst of both worlds. No doubt this will continue to be the case while so many eminent Republicans fear contributors more than voters.

Capital Investment Program To Be British Election Issue

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

On February 23 the British people will express their verdict on five years of socialism.

Nationalization, except for steel and insurance, will not be an issue. Neither, in principle, will the National Health Service or the major welfare benefits. Both leading parties now support them.

But the Conservatives will take issue with the size of the government program, which now takes a third of Britain's output. The Tories say it is inflationary and wasteful. The Labor Party says it is putting the country back on its feet.

Investment Program Blamed

In 1947 Roy Harrod, one of England's best economists, published a devastating attack on Labor's program which he called "Are These Hardships Necessary?" It presented a simple but significant thesis: that Britain's postwar austerity and drabness, far from being necessary, was the direct result of the government's topheavy and indiscriminate program of capital investment.

In 1946, said Harrod, the country had been close to solvency. Then came the American and Canadian loans, which released much of the pressure to export.

Not merely did the Government divert these resources to an extravagant program of building and modernization, it went so far beyond them as to make certain Britain would have to ask for more.

At the same time, the Treasury pursued a cheap money policy—held down the interest rate and thereby encouraged everyone with an investment plan to compete for scarce men and materials. As inflationary pressures grew, the government was then forced to intensify wartime control on prices and materials.

Diversion of Idle Money

But as usually happens in the case of suppressed inflation, idle money found its way into the uncontrolled sectors of the economy—to luxury goods, race tracks and betting pools, which diverted hundreds of thousands of workers from industries where they were urgently needed.

Harrod's angry little tract, coming as it did in the middle of 1947's economic crisis, gave quite a jolt to Labor's planners.

As other economists joined the attack, the government let interest rates rise, trimmed investment plans and accumulated a budget surplus. There was temporary improvement in 1948. But in 1949 the old problems had returned in such aggravated form that Britain was forced to devalue the pound sterling.

There were many economists who came to the government's defense. It was absurd, they said, to argue that Labor's investment program was too large. British industry was so run down that if Britain were ever again to be a major industrial power she would have to invest, not less, but much more than she was doing.

Most Went Into Housing

This argument, as we all know, is true. However, let us look at Labor's investment program and see whether it fits the case.

Where has this capital outlay gone? Above all, into housing. The fact is that economics had little to do with this decision. Popular pressure for homes was simply too great for the government to ignore.

Nevertheless, it was costly, and it did little to put British production back on its feet. The second largest specific investment was in the nationalized transport industry, particularly in the electrification of railways. The third was in the nationalized power and fuel industries, including a large outlay for power plants and lines.

Now these projects, however desirable in the long run, could not be said to have first priority. There is suspicion that political motives weighed heavily. After all, Labor had nationalized these industries. When it went to the polls it wanted to point with pride to the achievements of socialism.

Would Conservatives Do Better?

After a long and destructive war, there is bound to be a capital shortage. Or to put it in real terms, a shortage of machines and materials for the needs that clamor to be met.

The wise thing to do, under the circumstances, is to put money where it will yield the quickest improvement. On the whole, this has not been done.

Would Conservatives do better? They say they would, of course, and they have attacked the government's extravagance.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Sister Kenny Admired Most, Survey Shows

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 24.—Eleanor Roosevelt and Sister Kenny, the world-famous Australian expert on the treatment of polio, are the two women most admired by the American public, judging by a survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Clare Boothe Luce, author and former Congresswoman, is third, followed by Helen Keller, author and lecturer who overcame the handicap of blindness and deafness.

Next is Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, who left the United States recently to return to her husband's side in Formosa.

The survey on the most admired women is conducted annually by the institute on the question:

"What woman living today in any part of the world, that you have heard or read about, do you admire the most?"

The top six this year are:

1. Mrs. Roosevelt
2. Sister Kenny
3. Clare Boothe Luce
4. Helen Keller
5. Mme. Chiang Kai-shek
6. Margaret Truman

Mrs. Roosevelt topped the list of popular choices last year also.

Man Arrested On Charge Of Drug Theft

A Gallinger Hospital pharmacist was arrested yesterday on a charge of larceny of District property in connection with alleged theft of drugs from the hospital.

The defendant is James W. Kinard, 35, of 1664 Rosedale st. ne.

Dr. Alvin B. Thornton, who has his office at 4832 Dean st. ne., told police he received a visit several weeks ago from a man who represented himself as a drug salesman and offered a case of dihydrostreptomycin. Dr. Thornton said he gave the man $100 for the case.

Later, he said, he found the name of Gallinger Hospital on the case, and notified police. After a lineup yesterday, at which Dr. Thornton identified Kinard, the latter was arrested.

Kinard was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner C. S. Lawrence, and released on $1500 bail.

Bedside Beauty Shoppe...

The Washington Post

HOSPITAL'S INNOVATION—A new mother, Mrs. Elvera Dehmer of 882 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., gets a hair-do and a manicure in Garfield Hospital from Mrs. Helen Bass, a beautician, of 2435 Clay st. ne. The beauty treatment is a new service for patients and area hospitals.

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Something refreshing in hospital treatments, beside beauty care, was inaugurated yesterday at Garfield Memorial Hospital.

The new service, with its overtones of psychosomatic medicine, is designed as a patient morale-builder, as far as the hospital and its doctors are concerned.

The patient pays, of course, at prices ranging from $1 for eyebrow arching to $12.50 and up for permanent waves. For the males, only shampoos, at 75 cents; scalp treatments, at 75 cents, and manicures, at $1.25, are available.

First customer yesterday was Mrs. Elvera Dehmer, of 882 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., who expects to leave Garfield soon with her new boy, who weighed in on January 18 at seven pounds, 11 ounces. She took the hair shampoo and wave.

Beautician-Technician for the new service is Mrs. Helen Bass, former department store cosmotologist. A new firm, Hospital Beauty Service of Washington, D. C., is behind the venture, and has negotiations underway for similar services at other District and area hospitals.

Beside beauty treatments, explained Leo Schmelzer, Garfield administrator, perk up a woman patient like a new hat—and the male one like a new necktie. Besides that, they have the approval of the American Medical Association, he added.

Defense Rests In 'Snags' Case

tions from Judge Alexander Holtzoff.

Lewis, alleged head of the multi-million-dollar syndicate; Attilio Acalotti, the self-styled "Mayor of Thomas Circle," and Frank Billeci, former circulation man for the Washington Times-Herald, have been standing trial for 16 days on charges of operating a numbers lottery.

They face sentences of from one to three years if convicted. All were indicted by the special gambling grand jury whch concluded its investigation of Washington gambling last November.

Defense arguments yesterday were marked by sizzling attacks on Government witnesses, and three sharp clashes between Judge Holtzoff and William H. Collins, attorney for Lewis.

Collins first tangled with Judge Holtzoff when he asked the jurist if he would recess for lunch nine minutes earlier than the usual 12:30 so that his arguments would be uninterrupted. Judge Holtzoff ordered Collins to start, interrupted him twice and then recessed quickly.

Next clash between the two came when Collins was tracing the growth of the jury system from the time of "Bloody John," King of England.

"Mr. Collins, I think you ought to discuss the case," Judge Holtzoff interrupted. "I'll not take up the time of the court with a history lesson."

After lunch, Collins resumed his arguments and told the jury that they were the sole judge of the facts in the case, and not Government or defense counsel or the judge.

Judge Holtzoff whipped off his glasses and interrupted Collins once more.

"Mr. Collins, I don't think it is appropriate for counsel to warn the jury about the judge," he said.

Myron G. Ehrlich, attorney for Billeci, told the jury, "You ought not to convict even a yellow dog" on the kind of testimony produced by the Government."

In marked contrast to shouting defense lawyers, Prosecutor William Hitz summed up the Government case in a low, unemotional voice for 80 minutes.

Lewis was the backer of the numbers lottery, he charged. He described in detail the pine-paneled air-conditioned "gambling room" with a one-way peephole, in a small bungalow at 4310 46th st., Bladensburg, Md., where Lewis was arrested March 25.

Bernard Margolius, cocounsel for Lewis, told the jury: "We admit that that place out in Bladensburg was no church. But we are not charged with violating the Maryland gambling laws, but the laws of the District of Columbia."

An admitted numbers player testified he saw his number bets turned over to Billeci, and then identified those bets on slips found during the raid on Lewis' headquarters, Hitz told the jury.

Took Bets

Bernice Franklin testified that during the nine months she lived with Acalotti "and helped him take horse and numbers bets over the telephone," Acalotti regularly laid off his bets to Billeci and settled with him once a week in an office in the Times-Herald building.

More than 20 Government witnesses refused to testify on the grounds of self-incrimination, Hitz said.

"Why did they stand on their constitutional rights?" he asked. "They did so because they felt their answers would help the Government convict them of a crime."

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Paul G. Hoffman, head of the Economic Cooperation Administration, and Richard M. Bissel, jr., assistant administrator, left today by plane for Paris where they will attend European aid conferences.

Prince Georges Defers Action On Woodlawn Home Project

A compromise was reported in progress yesterday between a Washington builder and homeowners of Woodlawn, Md., who objected to the proposed construction of 150 semi-detached homes nearby.

As a result the Prince Georges County Commissioners postponed a decision on a petition for the project. Plans call for construction of the homes on a 22-acre site adjoining the Woodlawn subdivision.

At a January 18 hearing, the Woodlawn Citizens Association opposed the project on the grounds that semi-detached construction would depreciate their detached homes and might cause an influx of renters.

Yesterday an attorney for Edwin B. Feldman, Washington builder who proposes to build the homes, and representatives of the association, reported they were working on a compromise which would remove objections.

In other actions the Commissioners refused to grant the Silver Spring Cab Co. permission to pick up fares in Prince Georges County, and approved a deficiency appropriation of $1303.03 for the transportation of parochial school pupils.

The commissioners announced the appointment of Harry W. Penn, jr., superintendent of the Prince Georges County General Hospital, as their representative on the county Community Chest and Planning Council.

The purchase of two police cars was authorized and the establishment of Forestville and adjacent territory as special improvement district No. 46 was approved.

3 Overcome By Fumes at Building Site

Three construction workers were overcome by gas fumes yesterday afternoon while working on the basement garage of the new Cafritz Construction Co. drive-in office building at 1625 I st. nw.

They are Wilson Morgan, 39, 609 Acker st. ne.; Thomas Davis, 35, 601 New Jersey ave. nw.; and John Haggins, 3400 15th st. se.

Davis and Morgan were taken by Rescue Squad No. 1 to Emergency Hospital where they were treated and released. Haggins was treated at the scene.

Norman Kindness, superintendent of the project, said the men had inhaled exhaust fumes from about eight gas engines running in the huge basement garage.

Mother Rescues Baby as Fire Sweeps Riverdale Apartment

A red-haired, 19-year-old wife rescued her 8-months-old daughter from their flaming apartment yesterday afternoon

She is Jean, wife of Jesse Webb, 5603 Longfellow st., East Riverdale, Md. The fire started in the apartment shortly after 1 p. m.

Mrs. Webb, who had been frying potatoes, said she had shut off the gas and gone downstairs to get mail. On the way back to her third-floor apartment, she stopped to talk with Mrs. Judy Taylor. When she reached her apartment, the kitchen, including cabinets, was in flames. She snatched up her daughter, Beverly Ann, and fled downstairs.

On the first floor, she summoned Vincent Fabrizio, who lives there and was home. He went to the Webb apartment and tried to put out the flames with a blanket, but was unsuccessful. Then he called firemen.

Members of the Hyattsville, Riverdale Heights, Riverdale, Cottage City and Bladensburg fire departments answered. It took them an hour to extinguish the flames which had eaten into the roof of the building.

'Iwo' Magnificent In Fighting Shots

By Richard L. Coe

"SANDS OF IWO JIMA," which opened before a top-flight audience last night at the Warner, is at its best in footage of actual fighting at Tarawa and Iwo.

This best is so good, so compelling, that the story and fictionalized scenes suffer accordingly. While John Wayne is believably cast as a tough sergeant who goads his platoon from early combat training to the gory landings, he's called on for some unconvincing scenes that even this skilled delineator of manly sentiment has trouble handling.

But those Marine Corps on-the-scene shots are magnificent, and watching them brings back more forcibly than any other means the debt a Nation owes the men, now dead or permanently maimed, who stormed those Pacific beaches. The Tarawa shots are especially notable and the Marine Corps can hardly treasure them enough.

The screen play by Harry Brown and James Edward Grant is disappointing in that it takes type figures rather than real characters for its subject. There is nothing wrong with them on that level, but the fact remains that continued use of certain characteristics has palled through a succession of war pictures.

John Agar, for instance, is playing the son of an honored Marine colonel, now reluctantly a Marine pfc. and hating every minute of his career. Inevitably, he meets a New Zealand lass, falls in love at first sight and, in the course of battle, discovers how pigheaded he was in a speech about the sort of son he hoped to have. It's a thoroughly awkward role and Agar does little with it.

Wayne's skill at rugged guys with hearts of gold is neatly taken care of by the script, though just how his marriage broke up, what inner sorrows are his, are only suggested, and his motivations are cardboard rather than flesh and blood.

Lobby Display of Interest

While the supporting roles are stockily written, they are ably played by a solid bunch of young fellows, including Forrest Tucker, Wally Cassell, James Brown, Richard Webb, Peter Coe (nope, don't know if he is or not), Richard Jaeckel and Bill Murphy, the last two eternally scrapping twins.

In the Warner lobby, by the way, you'll notice some great trophies from the Quantico museum. The original flag which was raised on Mount Suribachi (the finale of the picture) is on display in a glass case, and there's also a small-scale model of the flag-raising memorial now under construction by Felix De Welden, eventualiy to have a prominent location on the Memorial Highway.

These, plus the real shots, are the memories you will take with you from the Warner.

ANOTHER high-flight opening will take place at the Palace on February 8. . . . That Wednesday night will attract the Air Force blues and silver for an advance showing of "Twelve o'Clock High." . . . This will be an invitation-only gala, with television covering the celebrities.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S next play will be Moliere's "The Would-Be Gentleman," with Father Gilbert V. Hartke directing. . . . The clasic comedy, which came back to prominence when revived as a vehicle for Bobby Clark after his Actors' Fund tussle with "Love for Love," opens February 3 and reservations are now being taken at MIchigan 6000, extensions 358 or 359.

STILL ANOTHER opening is on the books, the Flower Theater. . . . This Takoma Park addition to the K-B chain is going to be something mighty special, the ultimate shout in the pitcha palazzos. . . . More about this after Frank Boucher makes good a promise.

"SANDS OF IWO JIMA." Republic release produced by Edmund Grainger. Screen play by Harry Brown and James Edward Grant from a story by Brown. Music by Victor Young. Directed by Allen Dwan. At the Warner and the Ambassador.

Rights Measure Senate Vote Set

The Senate yesterday agreed to vote at 1:30 p. m., EST., today on a constitutional amendment giving equal rights to women. It requires a two-thirds majority.

If approved by House and Senate it still must win ratification by 36 States.

Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N.Y.) said during floor debate that it would upset State and Federal laws protecting the rights of women.

Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) said it would wipe out "discriminations" against women, but would not require uniformity of treatment between women and men.

While he was Governor of Maryland, O'Conor said in a statement, "We found it desirable and, in many cases, I might even say necessary, to call upon outstanding women of the State for assistance in matters of government."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ONE OF THE letters-to-the-editor correspondents took a crack at Bucky Harris the other day, an unkind one I thought, when he labeled Harris as a complete failure at the business of managing ball teams and deplored his return to the Nats.

Well, sir, I was always supposing that Harris had the most easily defensible record as a manager of any fellow who ever hove into sight as boss of a big league club. And that opinion must be shared somewhat generally because five major league teams grabbed him up eagerly and of the present-day managers only Connie Mack has lasted longer at the business.

POVICH

To be sure, Harris has won only three pennants in that 23-year span, but no club of his has ever finished last and there are some gems in his career that would seem to recommend him highly.

He took a Washington team that had finished 23½ games behind the Yankees in 1923, and won the pennant with it the next season, won a World Series with it, won another pennant, and for five years never finished out of the first division.

MOSTLY, HARRIS has had second-division clubs ever since, at Detroit, with the Phillies and at Washington, but that is not quite a stigma. Casey Stengel is an example of what can happen. Stengel, after leading the staggering Yankees to a pennant last season, has been variously acclaimed as the Manager of the Year, a miracle man, etc. Yet before that he could never get any of his half dozen teams out of the second division.

One of Harris' greatest triumphs, perhaps rivaling his feats of taking the Nats to pennants in 1924-25, was his one-year term with the Red Sox. In 1934, after moving on to Boston from Detroit, Harris had a sore-armed Lefty Grove, no adequate first baseman, no shortstop, yet took the Red Sox into fourth place.

A year later, after Tom Yawkey had bought a combination shortstop-playing manager in Joe Cronin for a quarter million dollars, and added Jimmy Foxx and Rube Walberg, that Red Sox team was supposed to go places. It did—into fifth place, a worse finish than a weaker Boston team had made under Harris.

IN FIVE SEASONS at Detroit, Harris never could manage the Tigers into the first division, but when he moved on to Boston, he bequeathed a whopping legacy to the Detroit club nevertheless. He insisted that a big awkward fellow who was trying to play first base should not be cut loose and vowed that he would make good. Until Harris stepped in, the Tigers were on the point of letting Hank Greenberg's option expire.

When he did get some ball players to work with, at New York, Harris did very well, you'd have to say. He took those 1947 Yankees to the pennant, and the next season with Joe DiMaggio ailing and Joe Page having a horrible year, Harris didn't yield the pennant until the last day of the campaign. Thereat, he was fired in one of the gross injustices of the game.

Larry MacPhail, one of the smart men of the business, brought Harris into the Yankee organization in 1946, as a front-office assistant. But that was only a temporary post. MacPhail was so smitten with Harris' managerial talents that he knew who the club's next manager was going to be, what with Joe McCarthy tiring of the job.

HARRIS ISN'T bemusing himself about certain features of the Washington club he has inherited—an eighth place outfit that doesn't hit well, lacks pitching and is not very smooth around second base. He is aware that there is no substitute for talent and is daily beseeching Clark Griffith to bestir himself and revive some of the deals that weren't made.

He's crimped for trading material, but Harris would gamble on parting with such as Ray Scarborough or Eddie Robinson in a deal that would fetch both a first and second baseman, or another pitcher. His great disappointment was when the Yankees didn't trade George Stirnweiss to the Tigers for Dick Wakefield. Harris had Griffith on the point of paying enough money to fetch Gerry Priddy from the Browns, before the Tigers stepped in and bought him.

The Nats may be lacking in certain skills under Harris next season but they won't be lacking in inspiration or team spirit. Harris may be saddled with mediocrity, but he doesn't compromise with anything less than give-all. The manager isn't one of the Washington club's weaknesses.

Central's biggest margin was a 41-22 advantage at the end of the third quarter. The Vikings led at the end of the first period, 13-6, and at the half, 23-14.

Terry Gregory led Central to its fifth win in eight games. He scored 15 points and held St. John's leading scorer, Guard Bob McLindon, to one field goal

DiMag Gets $100,000; Jackie Signs For $35,000

By Joe Reichler

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—Two of New York's most expensive pieces of baseball bric-a-brac were locked up in the front office show cases today when Joe DiMaggio and Jackie Robinson signed their 1950 contracts.

DiMaggio, one of baseball's highest salaried stars, inked a New York Yankee pact calling for an estimated $100,000, equivalent to the sum he drew last year.

Robinson, the Brooklyn Dodgers' counter-part to the great Yankee centerfielder, agreed to terms calling for an estimated $35,000. Both were one-year pacts.

DiMaggio, looking fit and "feeling better than I have since before the war," declined to disclose the actual figure, but said he "would do as well financially this year as last."

Neither General Manager George Weiss nor DiMag would say whether the new document called for a straight salary or a bonus arrangement based on attendance.

No terms were made public although it was announced that the pact, making DiMaggio one of the two highest priced players in the game this season, was for only one year.

DiMaggio came up from the Pacific Coast League in 1936 but missed three season because of his presence in the Army. During his previous 11 playing seasons with the world champions he has been paid $445,750.

In addition, he has earned another $46,335.67 in eight world series.

Robinson, starting his fourth season as a Dodger, now is the highest paid Brooklyn player since Branch Rickey took over as president of the club. It is believed he also is the highest salaried performer ever to wear a Dodger uniform.

Dizzy Vance, famous pitcher of the '20s, was paid $100,000 for three years. That was believed

Lemon Again Turns Down Tribe Offer; He Wants $30,000

Cleveland, Jan. 24 (AP).—Bob Lemon, the Cleveland Indians' leading pitcher, turned down a salary offer again today.

Lemon, who won 22 games for the Tribe last season, is believed to be asking $30,000 for 1950. He is reported to have made between $20,000 and $25,000 last year.

Marlene Bauer Leads With 71

Miami, Fla., Jan. 24 (AP).—Marlene Bauer, 15-year-old girl golfer from Midland, Tex., blistered the Miami Country Club course today with a five under par 71 to win medalist honors in the eighteenth annual Helen Lee Doherty amateur tournament.

Miss Baur, had a 36 going out and 35 coming home. It was the second lowest qualifying score in the tournament's history. Her score on the back nine was one stroke better than men's par for the 6347-yard layout. Women's par for the course is 38-38—76. Defending champion Dorothy Kirby did not have to qualify.

Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., winner of the Tampa open tournament last week, and Mrs. James D. Platt, jr., of Miami tied for second with 39-36 —75's.

Bunched at 77 were Betty Dodd, Fort Sam Houston, Tex.; Marjorie Lindsay, Decatur, Ill., and Betty Mackinnon, Dallas, Tex., while Peggy Kirk, Findlay, Ohio, and Eileen Stulb, Augusta, Ga., tied with 78's. Margaret Gunther of Memphis, Tenn., and Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore, Md., tied at 80. Betty Garber, of Washington, D. C. had an 85.

Gussie Puts Off Marriage, Takes on India Tennis Title

By G. D. Kalyansundarum

MADRAS, INDIA, Jan. 24 (AP).—Georgeous Gussie Moran put off marriage and took on another tennis title today.

"Not being married," she cabled her mother in Santa Monica, Calif., after sweeping past Mrs. Heraldo Weiss of Argentina to win the all-India Hard Court Women's Tennis title, 6—0, 6—3, 6—1.

But the girl whose lace-trimmed panties were the 1949 sensation at Wimbledon explained she didn't mean her engagement to Anthony Davenport, British-born Calcutta businessman, is cancelled.

It's only postponed indefinitely, she denlared.

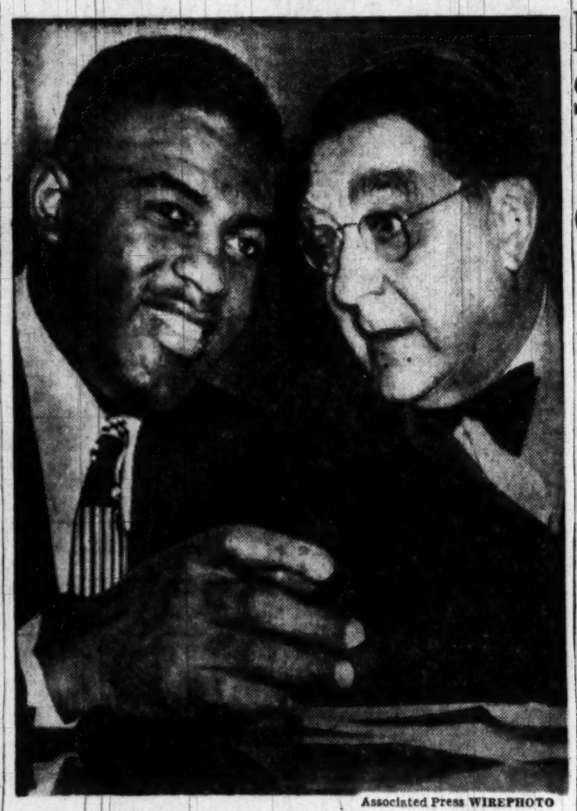

"I don't like going against parents' wishes," she said.

Asked whether the engagement will stick, she replied: "I cannot say what will happen."

Miss Moran, 26, announced in Calcutta Friday that she would marry Davenport, 28-year-old Oxford man and a wartime major in the Grenadier Guards. She said it was "love at first sight."

Davenport's father, Economist Nicholas Davenport, said then at his home in Berkshire, England, that he approved the match because "I can trust my son's judgment," but suggested that they wait six months. He is the author of a book, "And So to Wed," which counsels plenty of waiting.

The net star's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Moran, also proposed a delay. They sent her a cablegram urging that she wait until she returns to Santa Monica to think it over.

Jim Thorpe Rated Greatest Player

NEW YORK, JAN. 24 (AP).—Jim Thorpe, whom his Indian mother named Bright Path, is the greatest United States football player of this century, in the opinion of sports writers and broadcasters who participated in the Associated Press' poll.

Thorpe combined the Irishman's love of combat, which he inherited from his father, with the Indian's cunning and grace to gain his place in the sport's Hall of Fame in 1911 and 1912, playing left halfback for the now defunct Carlisle, Pa., Indian Institute.

None of the modern players, benefitted by the game's amazing growth through the intervening four decades, could nudge the 6-fot 2-inch, 190-pound Sac and Fox warrior from first place.

Of 391 voters who took part in the mid-century poll, 170 put Thorpe on top for his almost legendary feats. Harold (Red) Grange, Illinois' Galloping Ghost of the mid-twenties, was second with 138. Bronko Nagurski, Minnesota's strongman of the Grange era, was third with 38, followed by Ernie Nevers of Stanford and Sammy Baugh of Texas Christian. Each had seven votes.

Charles Trippi of Georgia, whom Thorpe rates as the greatest player he ever saw, got only three votes and finished eighth in the ranking. The Dixie Dynamo also was surpassed by Don Hutson of Alabama and George Gipp, Notre Dame immortal. Hutson received six votes, Gipp four.

Strangely enough, Thorpe bowed out of football in 1928 after his team, the Chicago Cardinals, lost to Grange and the Chicago Bears, 34 to 0. An Associated Press account of the game says Thorpe "was unable to get anywhere. Now in his forties and muscle bound he was a mere shadow of his former self."

Thorpe was born near Prague, Okla., in 1888, one of twin boys each of whom weighed 10 pounds. The brother died of pneumonia shortly after his eighth brithday. By 1903 the budding athlete was at Carlisle, hoping to become an electrician. When it was discovered that Carlisle did not offer such a course, he switched to the tailoring school and thus got his first chance to play football as a guard on the tailor eleven.

But it was almost two years later that he first attracted attention of the school's coach, Glenn (Pop) Warner and then as a high jumper. Warner at the time, rated himself more a track coach than as a football mentor.

DURING virtually the entire season, Thorpe sat on the bench but in 1908, when the Indians' regular half back was injured, the Oklahoman got into the fray. In the very first encounter he sped 65 and 85 yards for touchdowns that brought the tiny school an upset triumph over mighty Pennsylvania.

By season's end he was the most talked about athlete in Pennsylvania and Warner looked ahead with pleasure. But Thorpe failed to return to schoool in 1909 and again 1910. Subsequent athletic history reveals that he was playing professional baseball—an action that later cost Thorpe his Olympic medals and trophies after having been called the world's greatest athlete by the King of Sweden.

He was lured back to Carlisle in 1911 by Warner, still track minded, who promised Thorpe that if he returned and practiced the Indian could make the 1912 Olympic team.

Then followed two of the greatest football years ever enjoyed by any athlete, climaxed by being named to Walter Camp's All-American team for both years.

For many football followers Thorpe's exhibition in the 1911 game against Harvard, then the ruler of the football universe, was the greatest of his career. Thorpe himself rates his the 1912 game with Army as the greatest thrill of his football career.

Against Harvard, with his legs encased in bandages because of the pounding they had taken in victories over Lafayette and Penn, Thorpe kicked four field goals and plunged 70 yards in nine plays for a touchdown that brought the Indians an 18 to 15 victory. The decisive field goal

LeBaron Wants to Make Hay, Not Play for Chicken Feed

STOCKTON, CALIF., Jan. 24 (AP).—Eddie Lebaron, College of Pacific's mighty mite, plans to sell chicken feed—not play for it.

Lebaron, three-time Associated Press Little All-America quarterback, was drawn by the Washington Redskins in the National-American Pro Football League draft.

"I seriously doubt if the Redskins can interest me," the 160-pound Eddie said last night. "I'm waiting to see what they say. But it'll have to be a pretty good deal."

Lebaron, voted the outstanding player in the Shrine's East-West charity game at San Francisco December 31, said he has been offered a partnership in a hay and feed business here. He called it "the chance of a lifetime." And, he added, it "would demand nearly all of my time. I couldn't be away six months a year playing football."

Lebaron said he has had "an excellent offer" to play football in Canada. He didn't name the team. Ottawa, a Canadian pro team is interested in another Redskin draftee, Charley Justice.

"The season up there is only two or three months long and I could afford to be away that long," he said.

Eddie said he couldn't "see what the Redskins want with me because they already have two great passers in Sammy Baugh and Harry Gilmer. I understand Baugh is the only fellow on the Redskins who makes big dough."

Briton Hit So Hard in 10th He Is Carried Out

By Victor Kalman

London, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Before a record indoor British fight crowd of more than 20,000, Joey Maxim—light-punching "Cutie" from Cleveland—won the world's light heavyweight championship tonight by knocking out England's Freddie Mills at 1:54 of the 10th round in Earl's Court.

Although the stream-lined, black-haired boxer from Ohio had been a 6 to 4 favorite to win because of his skill, his knockout victory stunned the jammed crowd.

Not only did Maxim knock out the stocky, curly brown-haired British veteran, but he hit him so hard that his handlers had to cary him to his corner and revive him there. Mills' legs still were buckling 10 minutes later. He had to be assisted from the ring.

First Defense of Title

Mills, 30, was attempting the first defense of the 175-pound crown he wrested from American Gus Lesnevich 18 months ago. He suffered the sixth knockout of his long career when Referee Andrew Smyth counted 10 over him.

The knockout came during a thrilling exchange in the tenth. Mills, slightly behind on points, was trying desperately to knock out the usually weak-punching American.

Mills, attacking savagely, missed with wild left hooks and rights as Maxm bobbed under and came up with a hard left uppercut to the chin. He followed with a left hook to the chin that knotcked Mills back onto his heels.

Then Maxim exploded a short straight right on Freddie's chin, and Freddie went sprawling backward to the canvas. He tried to rise at the count of six, but fell forward and lay unconscious with his face in the ring resin.

Maxim will now claim the "white heavyweight championship of the world," in addition to wearing his world light heavy crown, according to Manager Jack Kearns.

Punches Like Dempsey

Elated, Kearns yelled, "Let the winner of the Bruce Woodcock-Lee Savold fight at London in May challenge Maxim for the world white heavyweight championship. The NBA awarded its heavyweight title to Ezzard Charles, and I'm just taking a leaf from the NBA book."

Kearns, former manager of Jack Dempsey, declared, "Joey was hittin' like the old Manassa Mauler tonight!"

Mills, realizing that he must knock out Maxim in order to keep his title, forced the fighting in every round, and after the fifth, his efforts were so savage that he began to tire. Maxim was warned for holding in the third and sixth rounds.

Mills' early attack won the first and third rounds and gave him an even break in the second. Then Maxim's left jabs and effective counter punches won the next four rounds. They fought on even terms in the eighth and ninth.

Lions' 2-Year Losses $206,000

Detroit, Jan. 24 (AP).—President Edwin J. Anderson of the Detroit Lions disclose tonight the team had lost $206,000 in its last two seasons of National Football League play. The group of Detroit businessmen, now headed by Anderson, paid an estimated $500,000 for the club when they bought it from Chicagoan Fred Mandel two years ago.

Anderson said the club lost $93,798.09 in 1948 and $112,943.33 last year. He said the club was financially able to operate for another year without any necessity for a special levy on the stockholders.

Angry Marshall Calls Colts 'Dead'

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The Washington-Baltimore football honeymoon apparently came to an abrupt end yesterday with Redskin Owner George P. Marshall castigating Colt President Abe Watner, even divulging that Baltimore owes him $100,000.

Marshall, apparently incensed because the National-American Football League made Baltimore the "swing" team over his lone objection, stormed from the Philadelphia meeting.

The Associated Press reported him saying:

"The Colts are dead. Abe Watner wouldn't listen to me. I've been in the game for 18 years and he has been in it for 15 minutes.

Marshall intimated that anyone who didn't take his advice in pro football is a dead duck financially. He cited that he had tried to talk to Dan Topping (former owner of the New York Yankees) but that Topping wouldn't listen and went on to lose money.

"You can't help people who won't help themselves. I want to see Baltimore make money. After all, they owe me $100,000," Marshall said.

Mild-mannered Watner took Marshall's attack in stride. He said, "I have one correction to make—I've been in the game 96 hours, not 15 minutes."

Unperturbed, Watner said, "Well, we have minds of our own. The Baltimore club is quite happy with the way things worked out. Over a two-year period, we'll have every team in the league in Baltimore. That suits us.

"Time will tell whether Marshall is right or we are. And we think we are."

Marshall's mention of the money owed him was a strong hint that Baltimore had to pay him $150,000 for franchise rights in the new NAFL.

The figure never has been released officially. Earlier, Baltimore denied it was paying Marshall anything. However, it was

Video Outlook Dim For Redskin Games

Chances of Washington video viewers seeing Redskin games next season virtually are nil, according to action taken by the National-American Football League yesterday.

Televising of home games is forbidden except for sellouts and then Commissioner Bert Bell has to approve. Washington games away can't be televised to the Capital if the Colts are playing Baltimore. And that's what schedule plans call for now.

Brawl, Rodeo Started Girls On Road Here

SUGAR and spice and everything nice—that's what my grandma told me little girls were made of.

Haight

However, she never gave me the ingredients used to mold girl wrestlers.

Perhaps it's because of this reason that, after watching the muscle misses render themselves almost hors de combat, I invariably wonder why and how they become addicts of the sport.

Now don't get me wrong. They put on a good show and have as much, if not more, right to pull each other's hair and stamp on each other's chests as bobby-soxers have to tear a crooner to shreds.

Take tonight for instance; Violet Viann and Dot Dotson are booked to a finish in the feature of the Turner's Arena show.

One thing is certain, I know their mothers didn't raise them to be wrestlers. How did they get that way? Well, I found out.

Violet was a high school basketball and track star in Kansas City and wouldn't have thought of wrestling had not she and a brother gone to live with an uncle on a Selma, Colo., ranch. She learned to rope a calf, round up cattle and shoot a rifle "as well as a man," she says.

Uncle was a wrestling fan and used to take Violet to the Denver shows promoted by George Zaharias (Babe Didrikson's husband). Girls were just beginning to wrestle there and Violet believed she could throw any of them.

She begged Zaharias for a chance but he brushed her off because of lack of experience and size.

It wasn't until two years later she talked a promoter at Memphis, Tenn., into putting her on a show. "I pinned the hometown pride that night," she said. "And I haven't had any booking trouble since."

Dot Dotson, however, gained a wrestling foothold in another way.

A mechanically-minded youngster, Dot learned to drive an auto early, and when she had enough book learning, she obtained a job jockeying a bus carrying the children to and from school.

A year later, she was piloting a taxi in Orlando, Fla.

"One night a big bruiser climbed into my cab and said he wanted to go to Daytona Beach. That's a long haul but I agreed. Just outside the city limits, the fare asked me to stop since he didn't want to go any farther.

"I smelled trouble. When I

Caps Finally Win, 75-67 Over St. Louis

Chicago, Jan. 24.—The Washington Caps snapped their two-game losing streak at the expense of St. Louis, 75-67, in a National Basketball Association game tonight before 10,722, largest pro gathering of the season here.

Most of the crowd came out to see big George Mikan and he didn't disappoint, leading Minneapolis to an 80-68 victory over the Chicago Stags. Mikan poured in 40 points, half his team's total, on 15 field goals and 10 free throws.

Fred Scolari and Johnny Norlander were Washington's high scorers with 15 and 14 points. However, they took a back seat to St. Louis' Johnny Logan, who made 23.

The Caps took the lead at the five-minute mark, 7-6, on a long one-hander by Bones McKinney, and they kept it all the way.

Four straight free throws by Coach Bob Feerick gave Washington a 20-16 advantage at the end of the first quarter. After two by Chick Reiser and a layup by Johnny Norlander had made the Caps' lead, 24-16, the Bombers made their last serious threat to take the lead.

Easy Ed Macauley, with two buckets and Ace Maughan, with tip-in, cut the Bombers' deficit to 26-25, but then the Caps were off again. Jack Nichols dumped in two free throws and Freddie Scolari and Norlander each put in two field goals, and by halftime, Washington was on top, 43-34.

New Orleans Double Pays $2491, Hialeah $1635

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks:

One of my pet peeves has been the three-furlong races at Hialeah for 2-year-olds. In the first place these baby horses are not 2 years old, but one year plus the number of months away from January 1 that they were foaled. It is true that the early competition doesn't hurt some who are allowed to race practically on their own courage. However, the majority are hustled away from the gate and ridden to the utmost in attempts to knock out that good purse money. It is not true that all juveniles who race in January and February turn out to be duds later. However, a good number of the baby winners hit the skids later on. Hialeah eggs on owners and trainers by offering a $10,000 stake on March 1.

Robber Pays $325.60 to Set Record

By The Associated Press

A chosen few $2 investors in the popular daily double will long remember Tuesday, January 24.

Yesterday was the day of "telephone number" payoffs on the twin wager at two tracks.

AT FAIR GROUNDS, New Orleans—A 24-to-1 shot and a 26-to-1 shot teamed to produce a return of $2491, a daily double record for the track.

AT HIALEAH, Miami—A 13-to-1 shot and a 162-to-1 shot combined to bring a payoff of $1635, second largest daily double return in the track's history.

The big monetary punch at Hialeah was inflicted by Robber, ridden by a jockey named Lynch. This horse set a new record for a single mutuel price in Florida when he paid $325.60 to win.

Robber's victory followed that of Acceptable, which paid $28.30 in winning the first race and the initial half of the double.

The key winners at New Orleans were Aristocrat which took the first race at $50.80 and Tiny Tidy which accounted for the second event at $54.20.

The only double to top yesterday's at Hialeah was the $2,691 paid by Fiery Dawn and Bud's First in 1947. In 1933, Aunt Marsa and Traffic Judge returned $1150. New Orleans' previous high was $2207 paid by Hogie and Invermark Girl in 1947.

Until Robber's big payoff, the individual mutuel mark was 150-1 returned by Hank Mactavish in 1935 although Quemadito at 141-1 won last year.

The longest daily double of the year was registered at Sunshine Park, Tampa, Fla., last Wednesday when one ticket-holder, said to be a Washingtonian, collected $3250 for usual $2 investment.

Mrs. Pete Pihos Handicaps Double Without Intuition

Miami, Fla., Jan. 24 (AP).—The Hialeah double today proved a hunch for the wife of Pete Pihos, Philadelphia Eagle grid star. She was one of the 30 lucky ticketholders. Providing a new wrinkle in handicapping the lady applied the following logic to come up with the whopping double.

Sarner, owner of Robber, is the name of the Washington lawyer who secured her divorce prior to marying Pete: H. S. Clark, the trainer, was the name of the doctor that delivered her baby, and Jim Lynch, Robber's rider, provided the touch of having her maiden name.

to be the most money ever paid to a Brooklynite.

Neither Rickey nor Robby would disclose what the latter signed for, but when asked whether $35,000 would be a good guess, the second baseman replied "very good."

Robinson, voted the league's most valuable player after helping the Dodgers win the league pennant last year, received an estimated $18,000 in 1949.

The coming campaign will be the 31-year-old Negro's fourth with the Dodgers. He batted .342 last season to lead the league in that respect.

Rickey said Robinson's salary is the highest for a Dodger since he took over as head of the Brooklyn club. Robinson also is the first Dodger to be signed for the coming season.

The signing of the two did not come as a surprise although both players acted speedier than expected. There were rumors that DiMaggio would be asked to take a $25,000 cut and that Robinson would hold out for $50,000.

THORPE—From Pg. 17

was booted from the 48-yard line.

Angered by hints that Carlisle could handle only the minor schools but folded against the big ones, the Indians went on the warpath as the 1912 game with Army approached. They had been criticized for their failure to defeat Washington and Jefferson that year.

IN the first three minutes of the game, Thorpe carried three cadets across the goal to score his first touchdown. Later, he caught an Army kick on his 10 and raced 90 yards for the score. However, the run was nullified by a penalty. Army kicked again, Thorpe caught the ball, this time on the five. He wove his way 95 yards for the touchdown.

He finished that day by gaining 22 of the Indians' 27 points. Army, second only to Harvard in Eastern rankings, had 6.

After his college career he turned to professional football and helped what is now the National-American Football League with his play while a member of the Canton (Ohio) Bulldogs.

asked for my fare, he grabbed me and mauled me. Somehow we landed on the road and I caught him on the chin with a righthander.

"He rushed me and I got a grip on him and spun him over my shoulders. Just then a car stopped and the driver asked, 'Want any help, miss?' I said no—and I didn't. I was still slamming the guy around when the cops came and arrested him.

"The bystander handed me his card. It read: Phil Duffy, wrestling promoter, Lakeland, Fla.

"And here I am."

What are girl wrestlers made of?

Could be courage and spunk, in a great big chunk.

Hutchison Adds New Job

Dick Hutchison, jr., Maryland harness racing's original man in motion, bobbed up yesterday as manager and assistant to the president of the new Baltimore Raceway.

It will be the third track he has helped open in as many years. Hutchison, primarily interested in Laurel Raceway, will continue as president and general manager of the nearby track.

Baltimore's new $1,300,000 plant is now under construction. It's located on Pulaski Highway (Route 40), half mile from the Glenn L. Martin aircraft factory.

Hutchison, 31-year-old horseman turned businessman, opened his own track in 1948. Last year, he served as general manager at Ocean Downs' opening meeting. He left when the track wanted a full-time general manager and was succeeded by Dick Case, who relinquished a similar post at Rosecroft.

MARSHALL, From P. 17

Marshall Calls Colts 'Dead'

confirmed that Baltimore has to pay the league $50,000 annually for three years and it wasn't the Colts' business what the league did with the money.

At the Philadelphia meeting, a clubowner hostile to Marshall made a slip of the tongue and said that Washington was to receive $150,000 from Baltimore.

The Washington-Baltimore split came suddenly. At the beginning of the meeting, Marshall seemed to be introducing all the motions and his friend, Abe Watner, was kept busy seconding them.

Marshall insists on being unreachable after he leaves his office in the late afternoon. He made a brief stop yesterday then disappeared as usual.

Coach Herman Ball undertook to explain Washington's objection to Baltimore being the "swing" team, an assignment that requires the Colts to play every other team in both divisions. Ball's explanation sounded plausible.

"If we're in one division and Baltimore is the swing team, it's not so good for either of us in our Washington-Baltimore relationship," he said. "It means that two, possibly three teams will play in both cities the same season, and that's considerable duplication, takes the edge off some of those games.

"We would like for a lot of Baltimore people to be interested in coming to Washington for games when the Colts are out of town, and vice versa. But that wouldn't be true if both teams play two or three of the same teams in home games.

"There is the additional factor of a home-and-home series. If Baltimore were in the opposite division from the Redskins (as Marshall wanted), then we could play each other home and home. We can't do this with Baltimore as the swing team. We can play only once.

"On top of that, if Baltimore were in the opposite division from us, the Colts would bring in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago Bears and the teams that the Redskins don't play. That way, the fans of Baltimore and Washington would get to see all 11 rival teams in the two divisions playing in our two cities."

3 Juveniles Seized for Cab Holdups

Three juveniles were arrested last night by a group of detectives from the Police Robbery Squad of the Fourteenth Precinct. Police said they admitted three taxicab holdups.

Two of the boys are 17 years old and one is 15. They will be turned over to juvenile authorities after police check other open cases on their record.

The detectives who made the roundup of the boys were R. J. Reed, S. F. O'Neill and E. P. Hallman of the robbery squad, and T. T. Barbour of the Fourteenth Precinct.

They said the three boys admitted these robberies of cab drivers:

1. Saturday night, Ross Whitney, 40, of 9305 Saybrook ave., Silver Spring, engaged at 15th and H sts. nw., and robbed in the 5200 block of Ames st. ne., loss, $12.50.

2. Sunday night, Joseph W. Sturiale, 38, of 604 F st. ne., also picked up near 15th and H sts. ne., robbed at 1st and S sts. sw., of $11.45.

3. Robert Keeland, 29, Harrington Hotel, picked up in the same vicinity robbed in the 200 block of Division ave. ne., $2 and his cab. The cab was recovered a short time later at Bladensburg rd. and M st. ne.

3 Homeless as Wall Collapses

The family of John Harrison was badly in need of a January Christmas present yesterday: a new home.

Harrison, his wife and their son, Evon, 16, were left homeless when a wall of their home at 629 S. Patrick st., Alexandria, collapsed Monday afternoon.

For the time being, Harrison is staying with friends, his wife with a sister-in-law, and their son in the radio shop where he is employed.

Harrison, a mechanic at the Alexandria Sheet Metal Works, has asked social agencies to help him find a new home.

No one was in the home when the wall collapsed and exposed most of the second-floor bedroom and a portion of the first-floor kitchen. Two row houses next to the Harrison house were razed recently to make way for a new supermarket.

Big Hill Battle Brews Over Vacation System For Federal Employes

A major battle appears to be in the making on Capitol Hill over the Federal employe vacation system.

The controversial Thomas letter, insiders believe, is merely an indication of congressional dissatisfaction with the annual leave practices. A key member of Congress had this comment:

"I don't know for sure what the Thomas letter is all about. But it's patently unfair if it would require all employes in the independent agencies to take all of their accumulated annual leave before July 1. Frankly, I don't believe Congress would back up Mr. Thomas in his demand.

"We must treat all employes alike in matters of leave, pay, retirement, etc. If anything is done to curtail leave we must apply it to all Federal agencies and employes. It would be folly to try to discriminate between Federal employes.

"But there is considerable criticism of the leave system. Some of my colleagues believe we should lower the limit on accumulatd leave. There are others who believe we should reduce annual leave."

Another top official said he favored a law to require Federal workers to take a minimum consecutive vacation of two weeks annually. The remainder, he said, could be used for Christmas shopping and for other personal chores.

Meantime, there has been no official interpretation of the letter of Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.) to the heads of the two-score independent agencies. In private conversations, however, Thomas has implied that his letter will force all employes in the independent agencies to take all of their annual leave before July 1. He is chairman of the independent offices subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee.

If Thomas wins his point—a most unlikely outcome—the President, for example, would be without help for the next several months, as most of his assistants have piled up 90 days of annual leave. The White House is under the independent offices bill.

A number of persons—including members of Congress—believe the Thomas letter has no legal basis and that it couldn't be enforced. If the Thomas directive is made a rider to an appropriation bill, it could be killed in the House by a single member raising a point of order against it. It would be legislation on an appropriation bill.

Furthermore, the present law clearly entitles Federal workers to annual leave and it allows them to accumulate and carry it over from one year to another up to 60 days. During the war years, when leave was sharply restricted, the workers were permitted to carry over 90 days of annual leave. A small group of employes still have 90 days of accrued leave.

The full House Appropriations Committee has taken no position on the Thomas letter. In fact, it hasn't even discussed the problem, and several members said they had no official knowledge of it. The committee, however, is expected to force most Federal agencies to absorb the cost of last year's pay raise bills. Thomas has ordered the independent agencies to soak up the pay bill cost.

NOTES: Representative Rivers (D., S. C.) yesterday introduced a bill to prohibit military people from being placed in civilian jobs. He acted at the suggestion of AFL's American Federation of Government Employes. The union charges civilians are being fired and uniformed people are being given their jobs. . . . A bill is before the Senate to allow Lieut. Col. Charles H. Bonesteel to serve as executive director of the European Coordinating Committee. . . . The Senate Appropriations Committee already has started hearings on the agriculture supply bill. . . . Mathias Niewenhous is the forest products adviser of the National Security Resources Board. . . . Civil Service's Fair Employment Board will begin hearings next week on the case of a dozen Negroes who charge they have been discriminated against in Treasury's Bureau of Engraving and Printing. The Treasury board upheld the bureau.

Bulk Sale Of Milk in Restaurants Is Approved

Consumer Savings Thought Possible By Elimination Of Small Bottles

Sale of restaurant milk in bulk rather than in bottles—which may mean a saving to the customer—was approved yesterday by the District Commissioners.

W. Gwynn Gardiner, former District Commissioner and attorney for the firm asking the change in regulations, estimated the new procedure could mean a reduction of three to five cents in the price of a glass of milk.

A Washington dairy official was not so optimistic, but guessed it would mean a reduction of perhaps 20 percent in the price charged restaurants by the dairies. Reduction would be due to eliminating the job of bottling and capping the milk.

Until yesterday a District regulation adopted in 1935 stipulated that milk sold in a public place must be sold as bottled by the dairy.

Reason for the regulation, said District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger, was that in those days sale of milk in bulk meant dipping into a can to scoop it out—with the attendant possibility of contamination.

Also there was no such thing as homogenized milk. The first customer to a new can got cream. The last got skim milk.

The amendment permits milk to be sold from a bulk dispenser approved by the Health Department provided the milk is pasteurized and homogenized; the dispenser is filled at the dairy; and milk is not kept in the dispenser more than 48 hours.

Request for the change came from the Monitor Processing Corp., of New Jersey, which has installed its product in New York and Chicago. Other companies manufacture their containers, it was learned.

The dispenser resembles in shape coffee urns used in many restaurants. About 4 feet high, the unit contains up to 80 quarts of milk and a cooling system. Milk is drawn from a spigot at the bottom.

The Health Department twice in the past year recommended against changing the old regulations.

After Gardiner had written vigorously to the Commissioners in behalf of the change, the Health Department made tests and found the new method "safe and satisfactory."

Louis was arrested Monday, charged with stealing two suits, a topcoat and a shirt after the complainant, George Fenwick, 309 I st. nw., spotted Louis walking the street in Fenwick's new blue suit and snappy gray shirt. The case was prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorney J. Leon Williams.

Revised Police News Rules Approved by Commissioners

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

Last Wednesday members of the robbery squad "clammed up" to reporters following "leaks" on the unreported holdups of gamblers Emmitt Warring and Theodore (Little Joe) Scheve.

Yesterday the Commissioners approved a number of revisions in the police manual, one of which underlines the rule regarding information given reporters.

Any connection? Police officials declared it was just a coincidence.

The revisions in the police manual which concern information to reporters involves three sections. All three sections previously referred to information given reporters by members of the force. Now the subject is covered in one section.

Previously, Section 15, Chapter II, of the Police Manual stipulated "members of the force shall not, directly or indirectly . . . give any information to any member of the press without the permission of the major and superintendent."

This has been deleted and Section 58, Chapter II, amended to read:

"Except by permission of the major and superintendent, assistant superintendents, inspectors, or the commanding officer of a precinct, bureau of division, no information contained in the files of the police department, or information concerning the status of any matter or of any case under investigation, or concerning contemplated changes in either the policy or personnel of the department shall be given to anyone not a member of the department . . .

"Members of the force shall not, directly or indirectly, give any information to any member of the press without permission of the major and superintendent, except as provided by the provisions of Chapter XXIV . . ."

Chapter XXIV provides for information given to reporters by the communications and records bureau.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, said the revisions were not significant, that they were intended to put previously scattered references to information to reporters in a single section.

Barrett said he knew nothing of any order within the detective bureau for detectives to give reporters the silent treatment.

He also declared the present revisions were prepared several months ago for submission to the corporation counsel's office.

Furthermore, he commented, the detective bureau is the province of Inspector Robert S. Bryant, assistant superintendent and chief of detectives.

Barrett said it was not his intention to restrict reporters in the gathering of news and that they would have as much freedom as they have in the past.

He added that he has been considering a conference with local newspaper editors to arrive at an agreement on this subject.

However, newspaper reporters at police headquarters have been grumbling for the past week to their city editors that apparently someone has ordered robbery squad detectives to shun reporters seeking information.

This curtain fell almost immediately after the story about the Emmitt Warring holdup broke. Subsequently, detectives reluctantly admitted they were investigating holdups of a big-money crap game and Scheve.

Another revision in the Police Manual reassigns the water boundaries of precincts fronting on the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers. The effect of this is to give the Harbor Precinct clear jurisdiction over all of the Potomac and its navigable tributaries lying within the District. This includes the Tidal Basin.

Another change is designed to "incorporate more information on statements of facts furnished to the courts in order to enable not only this department, but the Washington Criminal Justice Association and any other interested agency to check the progress of such cases, and their disposition through the courts . . ."

Bus Strike Settlement Considered

Negotiation Terms Withheld Pending Study by Union Employes of AB&W

A settlement of the A. B. & W. bus line strike was being considered early today. AFL operators and mechanics planned to meet at 2 a. m. in Alexandria to vote on a peace formula.

Terms of the proposed settlement were withheld last night, pending their presentation to the rank and file for a vote, but it is understood that the peace plan includes a wage increase.

Approximately 400 drivers and maintenance men belonging to Local 1131, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, struck last July 21 against the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington Transit Co. in an effort to win their demands for a 30-cent an hour increase in wages and other benefits.

The Virginia State government immediately seized the transit company, under a State act dealing with public utilities strikes, and has been operating the line since with the union workers sticking to their jobs.

Various Federal and State efforts to solve the dispute have failed. The company has offered a five-cent pay increase, but this has been turned down by the union.

Meanwhile, the union has attacked before the Interstate Commerce Commission the right of the Commonwealth of Virginia to operate the AB&W buses into the District of Columbia. The line carries roughly 75,000 passengers between Virginia and the District daily.

In the past couple of weeks, John Elliott, an international vice president of the union, has been engaged in talks with the company. Union sources said that a basis for peace has been reached.

Mrs. Lenroot Hits Parking 'Privileges'

The Washington Post

MRS. ELEONORE LENROOT
"How are your jails here?"

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Mrs. Eleonore Lenroot, widow of former Federal Judge Irvine L. Lenroot, yesterday was fined $2 for overtime parking in the 1800 block of Jefferson pl. nw., after she charged that "very important persons" living in that block obtained extraordinary policing of the area at the expense of other sections.

Without mentioning names, Mrs. Lenroot made it clear that she was referring to John Russell Young, president of the Board of District Commissioners, who lives at 1834 Jefferson pl. nw.

She brought this out when, on being told she could bring her complaints as to police procedures to the attention of the Commissioners, she replied:

"I'd like to ask the court if a case involving the president of the District Commissioners can get a fairer hearing by the Commissioners than by a neutral court."

For Overtime Parking

Mrs. Lenroot, who lives at 4644 Reservoir rd. nw., received an overtime parking ticket January 17 after she had parked her car in front of 1805 Jefferson pl. nw., near the real estate office where she is employed.

Mrs. Lenroot told Municipal Judge Thomas D. Quinn that she had not parked overtime and launched into a discourse on what she termed "special privilege" and inequities in law enforcement here.

The 1800 block of Jefferson pl. nw., "has more police surveillance per square inch than any spot in the city not excepting the White House," Mrs. Lenroot said.

Here Judge Quinn interrupted, remarking: "You are going far afield. We are considering a traffic violation. No traffic judge has any jurisdiction" over policing procedures. He commented that as far as the latter matter was concerned, Mrs. Lenroot had a "channel" of appeal.

"Who?" she asked.

"The District Commissioners," was the reply.

It was then that she referred to the president of the Board of District Commissioners.

Quinn Cautions Her

Again Judge Quinn cautioned that the issue was not relevant to the parking charge.

"Where can a citizen without a vote raise any question except in court?" Mrs. Lenroot protested.

She continued: "The time of Officer Guy (Pvt. R. L. Guy who ticketed her car) or some other policeman is entirely given over to policing this one block due to very important persons living there . . . one person habitually calls the Precinct and complains if the number of parking tickets is small. . . ."

Then Mrs. Lenroot testified that she could not have been parked as charged from 2:15 p. m. to 3:45 p. m. She said that at 2 p. m. she walked with a client to her car parked on Jefferson pl. near the 19th st. entrance and drove to the client's office on Connecticut ave., arriving there at nearly 2:30 p. m.

She said she returned to Jefferson pl. "well after 2:30 p. m." and parked her car. She testified that she found a ticket on it when she returned to it about 3:45 p. m.

Is Fined $2

At another point in her testimony, Mrs. Lenroot asserted she was later approached by Private Guy who, she said, offered to "cancel" her ticket.

After Mrs. Lenroot's testimony was finished Judge Quinn spoke up:

"The court finds you guilty as charged and fines you $2 or one day."

"What kind of jails do you have in the District?" the defendant asked coolly.

Mrs. Lenroot carried a lunch basket explaining that she had come prepared to spend the day in court.

Mrs. Lenroot's husband, who served as a Senator and Representative from Wisconsin for 19 years, died in January, 1949. He was a powerful Republican leader in the days of Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge. In 1929 he was named to the bench of the United States Court of Custom and Patent Appeals here, serving until 1944.

Mrs. Lenroot's stepdaughter is Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, Federal Security Agency.

2 Men Killed, 1 Injured in Nearby Area Auto Crashes

Ex-Army Major One Victim as His Car Collides With Tractor-Trailer

Two men were killed and one seriously injured early yesterday in traffic accidents in the Washington area.

Marlow

One victim was Courtney I. Stone, 41, a former major in the Army Corps of Engineers. The other was Stewart E. Marlow, 30, of 2704 33d st. se. The man injured was Frank D. Smoot of Brandywine, Md.

Major Stone's car was in collision at 4:30 a. m., with a tractor-trailer truck which Fort Belvoir military police said was driven by William D. Holder, 25, of Liberty, S. C., at the intersection of United States Route 1 and State Route 617. The intersection is in the Fort Belvoir reservation and under jurisdiction of military police.

Dead on Arrival

The former Major Stone was dead on arrival at the Fort Belvoir Hospital of multiple internal injuries.

Military police said Major Stone's auto collided with Holder's truck as the major entered the intersection, at Accotink Village. They said the two vehicles hit a steel pole and then a tree. The trailer behind Holder's truck jackknifed and spilled containers of hydrocyanic acid and paint on the road, but they did not break, military police said.

Holder was held at Fort Belvoir for several hours for questioning, and then released.

Auto Leaves Road

Marlow was killed about midnight Monday when an auto in which he apparently was a passenger, left the road on Maryland Route 5, between Clinton and Reds Corner. Smoot, who was apparently driver of the auto, was in serious condition at Casualty Hospital yesterday, with a fractured right arm and cuts and bruises.

Major Stone was listed in Army records as having been discharged at Fort Bragg, N. C., in December, after serving since 1942. He was listed as a native of Du Bois, Pa., and a graduate in civil engineering of the University of Pennsylvania.

He entered Army service in 1942, and was overseas for a time, serving in the Mediterranean theater. Indications were that he has a wife and child in South Carolina, but this was not confirmed last night.

Marlow was born at Glen Echo, Va., near Front Royal, and has been a resident of Washington since he was 2 years old. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer S. Marlow, with whom he lived, and a sister, Mrs. Mildred J. Twitty, of Grottoes, Va.

Battle School, Tax Plans Hit In Virginia

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Jan. 24—The successor to Governor John S. Battle's seat in the Virginia Senate turned on the administration's proposed school construction program today as "a very dangerous fiscal practice."

In his first speech since he became a Senator, former Delegate E. O. McCue, of Charlottesville, said he was "embarrassed and harassed" to find himself" at variance on matters of policy in two instances" with Battle.

He then attacked Battle's inaugural plea that 45 million dollars be given to localities for school construction — without matching funds—and that there be no reduction in State taxes.

"Matching of both State and Federal funds by the localities is a sound and fundamental financial practice," he continued. "The nearer we tie our schools and finances to our homes the better will be the pupils' opportunity, the teachers' welfare and the taxpayers' investments."

McCue recalled that he was a member of the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council which reported in 1948 that instructional costs should be borne 40 percent by the localities and 60 percent by the State. He said he would ask this ratio be used.

The Charlottesville senator also pointed to the recent Tax Study Commission's recommendation that the major basis for public school construction should be on a 50-50, or dollar for dollar basis."

Then he fired away at the tax program enacted by the 1948 General Assembly, which he said was mistaken" when it enacted what was then called "absolutely necessary" tax legislation.

"A matching basis for construction costs in public education would do much to make a tax reduction possible," he declared. He urged the General Assembly to amend the large tax measure enacted in 1948."

By a Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Jan. 24.—A bill to enable the nearby Washington area of Virginia to become "the biggest city in the State" will be introduced in the General Assembly, probably today.

Delegate Edwin Lynch of Fairfax said he had prepared a measure to enable Fairfax and Arlington counties and the cities of Alexandria and Falls Church to decide on a consolidation into a city or a city and one or more counties.

If and/or when the new city is created, it apparently will be the largest in Virginia. Apparently, it will have better than a quarter of a million population. Richmond had 193,042 in the 1940 census, but had an annexation in 1940 and 1941, so that its present population is estimated at 240,000.

In 1940, Alexandria's population was 33,523; Fairfax County, 40,929; and Falls Church, 5300, according to the United States census. And in 1948, a special Federal census of Arlington County listed 123,833 persons.

However, latest estimates available, are Arlington County, 123,000; Fairfax County, including more than 5300 in Falls Church, 73,000; and Alexandria, 58,000. This makes a total of 253,000.

Similar enabling legislation was passed during the 1948 session for the cities of Newport News and Hampton, the town of Phoebus and the counties of Warwick and Elizabeth City.

The Lynch bill would comply with acts now on the books that call for mutual consent by local governing bodies and a referendum of the people on any such consolidation.

Lynch said passage of his bill probably would have "no immediate effect" on the four political subdivisions in question. It will merely pave the way for eventual consolidation, which would establish "the biggest city in the State."

Senator Byrd was the principal speaker at the forty fourth annual meeting of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce. More than 500 persons filled the Terrace Room at National Airport to attend the session.

The veteran legislator cited socialized medicine, socialized housing, and socialized farming, as the danger signs on the road to socialism.

Veteran Printer Ends Life In Former Employer's Shop

E. Ward Bushong, 53, veteran Washington and Culpeper (Va.) printer who quit his job here less than two weeks ago, was found hanged yesterday in the plant where he had worked at 1015 15th st. nw.

He was found after his recent employer, Russell J. Thornhill, whom he had taught printing years ago in Culpeper, opened the shop for the day saw a note on the furnace room door reading, "Don't come in."

Thornhill called police, who entered the furnace room and found the body hanging by a knotted cord to water pipes overhead. Thornhill said Bushong had been allowed to keep a key to the establishment when he left on January 12 because he knew him as an honest man.

The coroner's office issued a certificate of suicide. Police said Bushong, who lived at 16 17th st. ne., had been in ill health and had had financial troubles.

Bushong had taught Thornhill the printing trade while both were working on the Culpeper Exponent and the Virginia Star in Culpeper.

He served with the Second Infantry, Virginia National Guard, at the Mexican border in 1916. Between the wars, he was employed at the Thornhill plant for several years, resigning to join the Bureau of Engraving and Printing during the last war. He returned to the Thornhill establishment three years ago.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. H. V. Bushong, with whom he made his home; a son, Edgar W. Bushong, jr., of 24 T st. ne.; a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Beckwith, of Rocky Hill, Conn., and a brother, H. L. Bushong, of Berwyn, Md.

Graveside services and burial will be held at 9 a. m. Friday in Arlington Cemetery.

Goodwill Group Building Permit Is Refused

The District Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday refused to let the Davis Memorial Goodwill Industries build a warehouse on an interior lot behind 4312-20 14th st. nw.

Neighbors objected to the heavy traffic it would involve and said they hoped to buy the land themselves for recreation or storage purposes.

After they had made their protest, the owner, Dolores Murray announced she would rent the land out as a parking lot if the Goodwill Industries were not permitted its use.

In other actions, the BZA granted 16 requests for special-use permits, deferred three and also denied a request for permission to establish an auto repair shop in the rear of 2318 4th st.

Requests approved included those of the National Press Building Corp. to place an air conditioning tower on its roof, which is already 10 feet higher than the District's 130-foot limit; and granted certain variances to Paul T. Stone in the building of a 200-unit apartment development for Negroes in an area bounded by Jay, Lowrie, 49th and Hayes st. ne.

Action was deferred on a request of the Minamyra Corp. to build a 130-unit apartment building on the west side of 14th st. between Rock Creek Ford rd. and Missouri ave. nw.

World's Two Top Twosomes Meet in Washington

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

THE Duke and Duchess of Windsor, here for a short visit, had lunch yesterday and spent the afternoon with Mrs. D. Buchanan (Aunt Bessie) Merryman. The duke and duchess are shown here as they drove away from her apartment late in the afternoon to return to the British Embassy, where they have been guests of the Ambassador and Lady Franks. Barkleys, Windsors Attend MacArthurs' Dinner Party

By Elizabeth Maguire

ALL THE WORLD loves a lover, so a small dinner for 12 last evening made headline news.

The top two twosomes of the world were brought together by Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d. They entertained at their house in Georgetown for Mrs. MacArthur's father, the Vice President, and his bride, Mrs. Alben Barkley, with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor on the guest list.

The Duchess is famed for her chic and flawless taste, while Mrs. Barkley has won everyone with a pretty smile and pretty face. Such charming ingredients are bound to add interest to a dinner party, and last evening's entertainment was one of the season's sensations. The small dinner list was enlarged considerably after dinner, when a number of additional guests were invited to drop by.

Earlier in the day the Duke and Duchess of Windsor lunched with Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, aunt of the Duchess who is known to everyone as "Aunt Bessie." The Duke and his Duchess will say farewell today to their host and hostess, the British Ambassador and Lady Franks, and return by train to New York.

Next highlight in the round of parties honoring the Vice President and Mrs. Barkley will be the dinner and dance to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz on Friday, February 3, at their house on Foxhall rd. The celebrity-studded gathering will include Comedian Bob Hope and Mrs. Hope, who are coming to Washington that weekend to stay with the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington.

Mr. and Mrs. David Lilienthal admire a Herblock atom cartoon

Tea Secondary At Reception For Herblock

More than a hundred guests from Capitol Hill, the Cabinet and other walks of official Washington dropped in at a tea yesterday at the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

The guests were invited to meet The Washington Post editorial cartoonist, Herbert L. Block, whose drawings are on exhibit at Corcoran. And once introduced to Mr. Block—better known by his pen-name, Herblock—they turned their undivided attention to his drawings.

Many of the guests were able to find themselves caricatured, directly or indirectly.

The retiring head of the Atomic Energy Commission and Mrs. David Lilienthal found it difficult to pick out a favorite among the cartoons culled from Herblock's work over the last three years.

But they seemed to chuckle most heartily over the drawings depicting Mr. Block's Atom Man.

Most of the guests, who had just come in from the summer-like Washington streets, laughed over the Herblock drawing of the Capitol Building and the Washington Monument melting away under the city's unusual heat.

The drawing of a State Department employe attending a cocktail party with a gag around his mouth caught the attention of many of the Government officials.

Representative Reva Bosone also attended, together with Mr. and Mrs. Paul Porter, Representative and Mrs. Mike Mansfield, Senator and Mrs. Ralph Flanders, Mrs. Oscar Chapman, Mrs. Harold H. Burton and many others.

Jewels and Sari Draperies Used to Tempt U. S. Buyers

London, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Relying on devaluation to tempt American women to buy more British-made clothes, Norman Hartnell, the royal designer, today displayed gorgeous jeweled gowns.

The man who creates the clothes of Queen Elizabeth and her two daughters stayed behind the scenes, directing the show of his spring and summer collection in his mirrored Mayfair salon.

There were no startling fashion changes, but Hartnell added a slight oriental note with sari-like skirts and floating Egyptian drapery.

The traditional tulle crinoline evening gowns were more magnificent than ever, sprinkled and scattered with small flowers, iridescent mother of pearl and colored sequins.

Suits were classic-tailored and overcoats were cut full in the back with dropped armholes. Skirts hung about 14 inches from the ground and jackets were slightly padded at the shoulder.

Earlier in the day Capt. Edward Molyneux pleased fashion critics with a demure collection of spring and summer clothes, designed to conceal, rather than reveal.

The 26 Molyneux models wore skirts almost as short as in the pre-new look era.

The captain, who spends most of his time in his Paris salon, was not present for the show, but the critics liked everything anyway. They applauded especially his afternoon prints with draped overskirts—shown with either "crash" helmets or cartwheels.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married 10 Years, With Good Husband and Two Children, Woman Is Happy Except When Fighting Her Love-Feelings for Bachelor Friend of Family

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I shall make this brief and to the point and perhaps you can tell me what is wrong with me. I am 33, married 10 years, have two children and a good husband.

My husband and I have lots of friends, and one in particular I shall call Mr. Jay. Whenever I see him, which is quite often, I have this terrific emotional feeling about him. He is unmarried and much like my husband in character and personality. Why, then, am I gripped by this feeling when he comes near me? Am I emotionally immature—or what?

I love my husband and children and am happy in every way until I see Mr. Jay; then I get depressed and feel low when he leaves. I know this is wrong, but what can I do? He is our friend and I wouldn't like to brush him off our list. The children like him very much and he is with us on holidays because he hasn't any family of his own.

I feel sometimes as if I want to put my arms around him and hold him close; then I realize what I am thinking and hate myself bitterly. I even resort to prayer to fight this temptation in my heart. Can you explain my feelings? It is one problem that my husband can't help me with, and I am looking to you for light. J. R.

Look Into Feelings, Then Invoke Reason

DEAR J. R.: It seems to me your trouble refers to almost total lack of emotional education. You have a blind reaction to feelings. You haven't learned to differentiate clearly between love and lust, for instance; and consequently whenever you feel a surge of deep fondness for Mr. Jay, you "fight" it as if it were a wholly immoral interest in him.

It appears that until now, you have assumed an inner attitude of wrestling with evil impulses, when affection kindles at sight of Mr. Jay. But I think it would be more constructive to "look" at your feelings, as the psychologists say, for the purpose of sorting the wheat from the chaff, the gold from the dross, and then give your rational allegiance to the former and gently dismiss the latter—not in the spirit of fear, but as one acting selectively in a tranquil spirit of good sense and good taste.

In bringing that approach to your feelings for Mr. Jay, you could admit to yourself in all truth, unhurriedly, "Yes, I think he is charming, lovable, likeable; I feel strongly attracted to him; he is much like my husband—," etc.; and then accept the existence of a strongly approbatory, or emotionally sympathetic attitude towards him. Finally—and this is important—carry that "awareness" through to certain rational conclusions that you will live by in dealing with him.

Let Love "Be," Like Sunshine

THE MATURE conclusion, or guiding principle, that I would suggest is that you needn't "do" anything whatsoever about your spontaneous affection for Mr. Jay except just "let it be" like sunlight in your consciousness. By that I mean you don't need to try either to express or formulate it, in words or gestures or day dreams; nor to try to repress it by driving it back down into the dungeon of your unconscious, so to speak; nor to try to slay it by "bitterly" battling the sympathetic feelings.

It is a safe generality to say that your confusion of mind in this instance poses a type of difficulty in human relations that is shared by probably nine-tenths of the world's adult population. The crying need of "all God's children" is to learn how to love in mature years in that spirit which Jesus exemplified in relation to his abiding sympathetic associates in his teaching years—namely, a spirit of tender disinterested kindliness, not vulgarized by clutching physical possessiveness of attitude.

In one illuminating paragraph Agnes Sanford points out in her book "The Healing Light" (Macalaster Park Publications) that the true corrective of "problem" love in human relations isn't to "fight" the unbidden attraction, but rather to give more generous expression to love of all in righteous ways. That is accentuating the positive—which causes negative tension to evaporate incidentally. M. H.

ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR NEW SYNAGOGUE—Benjamin F. Pollack (center) yesterday told Taos Sisterhood members about plans for the new Tifereth Agudath Ohavay Sholom synagogue, said ground will be broken for the building June 4. Pictured at the Sisterhood donor luncheon at the Mayflower yesterday are Mrs. Moshe Witken, wife of the Israeli economic counselor; Mr. Pollack, and Mrs. Harry Goldman, luncheon chairman

New Synagogue Plans Revealed

Ground for the new Tifereth Agudath Ohavay Sholom Congregation synagogue will be broken on June 4, it was revealed yesterday.

Plans for the ground-breaking were announced by Benjamin F. Pollack, president of the congregation, at the third annual donor luncheon of the TAOS Sisterhood at the Mayflower Hotel.

The TAOS congregation, which has a membership of 1500 and is said to be the largest orthodox Jewish congregation in the country, was formed by the merger of three synagogues in May, 1947. They are Ohev Sholom, Agudath Achim and Tifereth Israel.

The new building, which will be erected at 13th and Tuckerman sts. nw., is expected to cost more than one million dollars. In addition to a synagogue, it will include a Hebrew school, a small chapel and a community center.

At the luncheon yesterday, Rabbi Harry Silverstone, spiritual leader of Tifereth Israel, told the 600 sisterhood members that "The synagogue radiates life and light among its members. It is the instrument for disseminating a knowledge of Judaism, and is the center of Jewish activities and life."

Aficionados Report:

Don Fernando Takes Bull By the Horns, Collectively Speaking, and Throws It

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

ADMIRERS of Ernest Hemingway; followers of Sidney Franklin, the Brooklyn toreador; aficionados (or fans) of bullfighting should see the collection of bullringiana owned by Peru's Ambassador, Don Fernando Berckemeyer. It's the world's most comprehensive, exceeding in scope even that of Charles Bailey of Devon, Pennsylvania, the most knowing United States connoisseur.

The Ambassador commenced collecting accidentally. Inheriting a number of bullfight paintings, he just kept on adding and buying. The walls of a huge room are hung with paintings, lithographs and engravings, while a series of fireproof tin chests protect his unframed items. The pictures not only cover every imaginable suerte or phase of the actual bullfight, but also the bulls home life and his selection for the arena. There are portraits, too, of famous toreadors in full glittery panoply, and of such minor characters as picadors and banderilleros.

Don Fernando sticks to the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Among his outstanding prizes are small paintings by Goya and by Mariano Fortuny, plus a series of original drawings executed by Gustav Dore when he was nineteen. The artists represented are international: Holland's F. P. Van Halen and P. P. Rink; France's Pharamond Blanchard and H. Adams; England's I. Lewis, Lake Price and Lieut. Col. Hope Crealock; Spain's Manuel Rodriguez de Guzman, Becquer and Vila Prades.

Most entertaining, though, are two magazines, "Sol Y Sombra" and "La Livia," devoted entirely to bullish activities and featuring always a center spread of some gory ring mishap. And, incidentally, we learned how the bulldog got its name! A century or more ago the critters used to be tossed into the bullpen to bait and generally annoy bulls to a point of fighting frenzy!

Why doesnt some local museum stage a loan exhibit of the Berckemeyer treasures?

Senator's Daughter Will Play

THE NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART'S Sunday evening concerts are always delightful occasions featuring a variety of musicians, both experienced and just starting. Sunday's concert is the 384th in the series and stars of the joint recital will be Pianist Elizabeth Vandenberg, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, and Myron Sands, one of New York's up-and-coming baritones.

Miss Vandenberg made her first public appearance some years ago at Constitution Hall with the National High School Orchestra. Since then she has played as soloist with the Grand Rapids Symphony and with the National Broadcasting Company.

The gallery, scarcely recovered from the excitement of its Austrian Exhibition, is also having a special invitational preview next Saturday of a most unusual moving picture—a moving picture filmed without a living human actor, actress or even animal performer.

The film, which is full feature length, is titled "The Titan, or the Life of Michelangelo." It was made back in 1937 by a Swiss company, was kicked around unfinished during the war, and was finally dramatized by Robert Snyder of Film Program Services who signed up Fredric March to make the running commentary. It's all been photographed in Rome and Florence. The interesting method used is to show the portrait of persons mentioned, as for example, Leonardo di Medici. Sounds static, but isn't. The preview showing will be a kickoff for a future showing in a Washington theater and both Director David Finley and John Walker are giving luncheons before it.

Unusual Fashion Show

COME APRIL—the thirteenth, to be precise—Mrs. Truman has accepted the invitation of Mme. Vassili Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambassador, to be present at a most unusual fashion show. The costumes shown will be all imported from Greece and are Greek designed and made from Greek materials. There will be 125 in all—75 modern, 30 of the most exquisite old national costumes and 20 regional costumes still worn wherever the country-folk can find or afford the materials.

The costumes will be complete with accessories and a number of the modern gowns have been made by the famous Parisian couturier, Jean Desses, who is a Greek.

Mrs. Grady, wife of our Ambassador to Greece, spearheaded the whole idea and many of the fashion and production problems were handled by New York designer Muriel King, who for the past few years has made trips to Greece in professional advisory capacity.

Some of the mannequins will be Hollywood starlets; a few, perhaps, will be Greek beauties in this country. Mme. Tsaldaris, jr., daughter-in-law of the Greek Deputy Premier, will bring the collection from Athens.

After this Washington showing, the costumes will be shown in New York and California.

FROM THE MAKE IT YOURSELF DEPARTMENT: Coordinated worsteds lend great style to this slim, casual suit made from Simplicity Pattern No. 8187. Fine lines of red and navy on white form the plaid of the jacket. Solid navy is used in the skirt. Fabrics are among those being featured in today's showing of spring yard goods at Woodward & Lothrop's

Budget Fashion, New Fabrics To be Paraded

Women who want good clothes at a minimum price will be interested in the series of fashion shows to be presented today at Woodward & Lothrop's.

One of the showings will feature inexpensive, well styled cottons and nylons for spring and summer. The other, having special appeal for the home sewing contingent, will present a collection of the season's interesting new fabrics.

The latter show will be held in the fabric department at 11 a. m. and will be repeated at 3 p. m. Among materials to be stressed will be serge, in a wonderfully light-weight version; satin covert, a crisp, lustrous suiting in yarn-dye gray and beige; doeskin flannel and gabardine in clear, soft pastel shades.

Checked worsteds, considered especially good this season, will be shown in a wide variety of colors and patterns. In addition there will be worsted tweeds, sharkskins and tissue woolens.

Miss Frances Lane, fashion director of McKettrick-Williams, will be commentator at the presentations of ready-made clothes by that firm which is scheduled for 3 p. m. on the third floor.

The emphasis in this group is also to be on fabrics. Highlight of the show will be a dress made of printed nylon that needs no ironing.

Nothing that belongs to men seems safe, these days, from the predatory hands of women stylists! They have now raided the men's shirting field for fabrics to make the smartest cotton shirts we've ever seen.

Beautiful English jacquard cottons, woven of Egyptian long staple cotton; small self-color patterns, so soft and fine that they look like silk and in the most delicious pastel colors; very smart new striped broadcloths; pastel oxford shirting, following in the wake of the enormously popular pink oxford shirt fashion; the fancy piques that are used for men's dress shirts;—these are only some of the exciting new men's-wear cottons you will find in the smart new shirts for women.

Yes, "Post Want Ads Get Results" (For Post Employes' Wives, Too)

Abe Perlman of The Post's publications office has been looking at ads like this one for a long time and he's always thought they were something of a joke. He didn't really believe all the things that were accomplished with Post want ads. He joined with other Post employes (especially Walter Haight) in kidding about the "Post Want Ads Pay" notices.

But now, Abe Perlman has stopped laughing and has become a Post want ad booster. His wife placed a want ad to sell a bed, a washing machine and a pair of andirons and the response was tremendous. Almost too good, says Abe, who was routed out of bed in the early morning on his day off (the day the ad appeared) to answer inquiries about the items they were selling.

The Perlmans report that they must have had nearly 100 calls. "We could have sold at least 20 more sets of andirons," he said.

Follow the Perlmans' example and see for yourself that "Post Want Ads Pay." You'll find that it's easy to place a want ad in The Washington Post. If there's a phone listed in your name, you can call in your ad and charge it. Dial NAtional 4200 today.

Remember, at least 19 Post readers are still looking for a set of andirons. Use a Post want ad to tell them about the ones you have for sale.

Dominican Republic Names Woman Minister to U. N.

By Genevieve Reynolds

SENORITA MINERVA BERNARDINO, Latin America's most outstanding champion of women's rights, will take her fight for equal rights into the world arena. The Foreign Office of the Dominican Republic yesterday announced her appointment as Minister Plenipotentiary to the United Nations, where she has served as delegate at several U. N. conferences.

Next week she will present her credentials formally to Trygve Lie, Secretary-General of the U. N. This new job makes the dynamic woman's leader next in rank to the Dominican Ambassador in every country.

Her appointment climaxes a 15-year career of intensive effort on behalf of women in Latin America and in the world. Last summer she resigned as chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women during the Commission's conference held in Buenos Aires. At that conference a resolution was adopted declaring her the "outstanding leader in woman's affairs in the western hemisphere."

During her long residence in the Nation's Capital, Senorita Bernardino has chalked up many firsts. She was the only woman of the Americas to attend the Inter-American and World Conferences as a full delegate. She was the only woman accredited as a voting delegate to the 1945 conference at Mexico City on the problems of war and peace. She was a full delegate of her country to the San Francisco conference when the United Nations was organized.

And it was Senorita Bernardino who fought to include "equal rights for women" in the U. N. Charter. She also helped to create the U. N. Commission on the Status of Women, serving as its first vice president.

In the past few years she has flown over 100,000 miles to fight the cause of her sex at meetings in all sections of the world.

For her Pan-American work for women, the Pan-American Society decorated her with the medal of Bolivar and San Martin. In 1948 the Union of American Women elected her "Woman of the Americas."

VFW Head Urges Flag Etiquette Teaching

SCHOOLS and homes are negligent in teaching children the meaning of the Bill of Rights and the Pledge of Allegiance to our Flag. This is the observation of Mrs. Donat F. Monaco of Santa Fe, New Mexico, national president of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars. She addressed a press conference at the Statler Hotel yesterday.

Mrs. Monaco came to Washington to attend a meeting of the some 200 VFW Auxiliary department heads and chairmen today at 1:30 p. m. The VFW Auxiliary's conclave will precede the 24th annual Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, to be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Statler.

After traveling 60,000 miles in this country and the Panama Canal Zone, Mrs. Monaco observes, "Many schools don't have flags in classrooms. And children don't know flag etiquette."

'Let Freedom Ring'

During her term of office, the auxiliary president will stress a program of teaching activities called "Let Freedom Ring," which will interpret American history. Parents will be urged to hold family readings on such historic documents as the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights. Greater awareness of citizenship responsibilities will also be emphasized.

Mrs. Monaco said that the VFW auxiliary will intensify and extend its comprehensive community service program in 1950.

Among the auxiliary's projects is a national home for war orphans and widows at Eaton's Rapids, Mich. Currently, 199 VFW war orphans are being cared for there. More than $500,000 was contributed by auxiliary members for maintenance and construction at the home last year.

Washington Club Elects

Five new members were named to the board of governors of the Washington Club at a business meeting held yesterday at the clubhouse. Those named were Mrs. Norman T. Anderson, Mrs. Paul Stanley Bond, Mrs. Frank Bunker, Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin and Mrs. John S. Pratt.

Off to Jamaica

Mrs. Ross McIntire left for Jamaica last week to spend two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Jan Noorduyn of Curacao.

Ask Anne About Having Silver Lacquered

Where in downtown Washington can I take several pieces of sterling silver to be lacquered? Is it advisable to have the following coated with lacquer to prevent tarnish? Small match boxes, Candle snuffers, candlesticks, dresser set, napkin rings?
M. J. M.

Washington has a number of firms that do excellent work of this kind. You'll find them listed under "Platers" in the yellow pages of the telephone book. (Most plating firms do metal finishing of all kinds, including lacquering.)

As to the advisability of having the articles you mentioned lacquered: It isn't such a good idea where the silver piece is to be handled often. The moisture from the hands affects the lacquering and it soon begins to look pretty scuffy.

I'd say yes, have the candlesticks lacquered and possibly the candle snuffer, if it's mainly a show piece. But if the match boxes, dresser set, and napkin rings are in daily use, don't lacquer them. Lacquering is for decorative items only.

Where is the new gift shop selling handmade gifts on commission? E. B. H.

I believe the place you have in mind is the Shut-Ins Craft Shop, a non-profit enterprise recently opened opposite the George Washington University Hospital. It sells unusual and everyday articles made by shut-ins—the handicapped, the ill, the blind, the grandma and grandpa who can't go out, and others confined at home by responsibilities. Mrs. Neyna C. Darcy is the manager, the address 910 23d st. nw.

Some months ago, you published a recipe (and picture) of a mocha layer cake made with instant or powdered coffee. It was one of the best mocha cakes I've ever tasted but I've searched this house high and low and can't find the recipe. I'm sure others would enjoy having it too if you would reprint it. How about it? C. G.

COFFEE LAYER CAKE WITH MOCHA ICING

½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
¾ teaspoon salt
2 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
3 teaspoons instantaneous coffee
¾ cup milk

Combine shortening, sugar, eggs, and salt. Beat until well blended. Sift together flour, baking powder, and coffee. Add ingredients alternately with milk to first mixture. Beat until batter is smooth. Pour into two greased and floured 8-inch layer cake pans. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) for 30 to 35 minutes. Cool and frost with mocha icing, made as follows:

1¼ cup hot water
¼ cup butter or shortening
2 tablespoons cocoa
3 cups shifted confectioners sugar
2 teaspoons instantaneous coffee

Dissolve coffee in hot water. In a large bowl, blend together butter or shortening and cocoa. Stir in 3 teaspoons liquid and 1 cup sugar. Gradually add remaining sugar and liquid. Beat until icing is smooth and creamy and easy to spread. Put layers together with icing, and frost top and sides of cake.

Are the plastic "sugar plum trees" available anywhere in Washington? I recently saw them mentioned in a magazine (House and Garden, February issue) and it seem a clever table decoration for parties.
M. M

These have just come out. In fact they weer among the pretty things featured at a wholesalers' gift show here last week. Several local stores now have them on order. One that expects some in around the first of February may be reached by calling District 2189.

While at grammar school some 25 years ago, we sang a song to the tune of Haydn's "Surprise Symphony," part of which was:
"Then the cauliflower said:
"Though I cannot think at all,
"Still I have a head.
"Like the cauliflower,
"There are children big and children small
"Who have heads but never think at all." R. Z.

Can anyone dig back in memory—or an old song book—and help R. Z.?

I wonder if you could tell me where there are some second-hand furniture stores. I am interested in finding a small table of the end or lamp-table variety.
M. S. K.

The very handy "Yellow Pages" of the telephone book should provide an answer to your problem, as they do to so many others. Look under the "Furniture—Used" section. You might make a few phone calls before going to the stores to see whether they have the type of tables in which you are interested.

Anne answers questions through her column only. We regret that time does not permit telephone and direct mail replies.

Ormandy Fares Well In Symphony

By Paul Hume

Eugene Ormandy introduced a fascinating new symphony to Washington audiences last night.

Under his direction, the Philadelphia Orchestra played the Sixth Symphony by Serge Prokofieff.

This latest symphony will do nothing to return Prokofieff to favor with his governmental denouncers. The music is decidedly melodic, richly harmonized, and often extremely beautiful. The first movement of the symphony is more coherent than the corresponding portion of his Fifth Symphony, played here last week by the National Symphony.

The slow movement is one of the finest ever penned by this ranking composer. It builds to a melodic sequence which is, note for note, and with proper harmony, the "Herzeleide" theme from Wagner's Parsifal.

The finale is a virtuoso galloping business far more effective than the not-quite-successful close of the fifth symphony. The score is lush from start to finish.

Zino Francescatti was violin soloist of the evening. He chose to play that tired "Lucia di Lammermoor" of concertos, the D Major of Paganini. He has played it here before. He plays it superbly. But why bother?

Organizations Discuss Plan For Belasco

Representatives of a score of local organizations met last night at the Willard Hotel to voice their interest in the efforts of the American National Theater and Academy to lease the Belasco Theater from the Government.

Clarence Derwent, president of Actors' Equity and a member of the ANTA board, read a statement by the board welcoming Washington's support of the plan. The board requested that until the terms of the lease were fully understood, the groups defer any campaign.

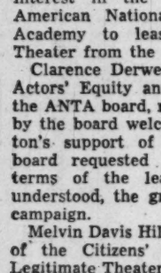

Melvin Davis Hildreth, chairman of the Citizens' Committee for Legitimate Theater in the Nation's Capital, presided. He welcomed the efforts of the newly-formed Friends of the Theater, headed by Mrs. Rufus Lusk, jr.

The question of a possible new theater building was raised by Mrs. Evelyn Freyman, coproducer at the Olney Theater, who said funds for a building were available.

A resolution indorsing the ANTA effort was adopted, which Derwent was asked to return to the New York board.

'Terrorism' Turns Into Boys' Fight

What police first thought was a gang beating of a 7-year-old boy yesterday turned out to be nothing more than a schoolboy fight.

Billy Smith

Police closed an investigation of the alleged beating of William Smith, jr., of 662 24th st. ne., with a report that he had been in a fight with two other boys, 6 and 8 years old. All three attend the Young Elementary School, 24th st. and Benning rd. ne.

The Smith boy spent Monday night in Gallinger Hospital after he told his mother he had been hurt. He was released from the hospital yesterday. X-rays showed that he had no serious injuries.

Self-Defense Pleaded by Pritchett

Fred S. Pritchett, 36, yesterday pleaded self-defense in the slaying of Clyde L. King last July.

Taking the witness stand at his first-degree murder trial in District Court, Pritchett testified that King had pulled a gun on him.

"I grabbed him," Pritchett asserted. "I heard the gun go off. I grabbed it and came down with the gun in my hand."

Pritchett is accused of shooting King to death in the cab of a locomotive, operated by King, in the Eckington yards of the B. & O. railroad.

The trial will be resumed today before Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough.

Man Lunges At Prosecutor

A 35-year-old former St. Elizabeths mental patient on trial yesterday for burglary screamed "kill me, kill me" and advanced on the prosecutor before being tackled and subdued by marshals.

The defendant causing the District courtroom scene was Russel L. Broadus, 35, formerly of 424 Q st. nw. He was charged with breaking into three houses in 1948 and stealing more than $1000, mostly in jewelry.

In summing up the case, to the jury, Assistant United States Attorney Robert M. Scott pointed out that Broadus could remember certain events during the period of the thefts but said he could not remember other "significant" events.

"I think this man can remember it all," said Scott.

At this point, Broadus rose wide-eyed, screamed "kill me, kill me" and started at Scott, who was addressing the jury.

'This I Remember'

'Standin' Fished While Roosevelt Met With Churchill

This is another installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1924 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

THE SAME NIGHT that my mother-in-law was dying my brother, G. Hall Roosevelt, who had a little house not far from my cottage at Hyde Park, was taken very ill. We drove him to Vassar Hospital in Poughkeepsie, and the day of my mother-in-law's funeral I had him moved to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington. Having been there for treatments made necessary by his service in World War I, he wished to go back to the same doctors.

As soon as possible after my mother-in-law's funeral we returned to the White House. The following few sad weeks I spent watching my brother die. He was so strong that his heart kept him alive long after most people would peacefully have sunk into oblivion; now and then he would recognize me when I went into his room. On September 25 he died, and the funeral was held in the White House.

The loss of a brother is always a sad breaking of a family tie, but in the case of my brother it was almost like losing a child. He had come to live with us when we were first married, and from then on, in spite of his great desire for independence, Franklin and I had been his closest family. Whatever happened to him he always came to us. With great anxiety I had helplessly watched a fine mind gradually deteriorate. He had such a strong physique that he was sure he could always regain his self-control, even though he voluntarily let it go for a while. It was impossible to convince him that if you let a habit get hold of you it is very hard to shake it.

Fundamentally, I think Hall always lacked self-control. He had great energy, great physical strength and great brilliance of mind, but he never learned complete self-discipline.

Sorrow in itself and the loss of someone you love is difficult to bear, but when it is mixed with regret and a consciousness of waste I think it leaves a touch of bitterness which is even more difficult to carry day in and day out. Perhaps that is one reason why I worked particularly hard in the Office of Civilian Defense.

On September 22, a few days before Hall died, I had promised Mayor LaGuardia that I would take charge of activities not strictly defense in nature but allied to defense and necessary for the protection of the civilian population as a whole.

Stays Up All Night

I PUT in many hours of every day at the Office of Civilian Defense, carrying on all my own work at home by working late every night. In the White House someone makes the rounds every hour to see that all is well. One morning my husband said to me: "What's this I hear? You didn't go to bed at all last night?" I had been working on my mail without even thinking of the time, and when suddenly it began to get light I decided it was not worthwhile going to bed. The man patroling the house had seen my light under the door, heard me moving around and had reported it to the household, and someone told my husband. I did not do that very often, however.

I soon discovered that the very thing I had feared was true. I could not take a Government position, even without salary or paid expenses, without giving ample opportunity for fault-finding of some members of the opposition in Congress and even to some of our own party people who disagreed with certain policies.

In spite of these troubles I took a trip to the West Coast with Mayor LaGuardia the night after Pearl Harbor. If I was able to give impetus to the work there and, merely by going out, quiet many of the rather hysterical fears prevalent at that time, then the country benefited and the trip justified my short term of office in the OCD.

Before I left on this trip I had told Mrs. Nesbitt to order blackout curtains for the White House. Almost immediately work had begun on a shelter in the Treasury Department basement; gas masks were given to everyone, and air-raid drills were held. I was glad to escape. My husband used to joke about the shelter and, to Mr. Morgenthau, say: "Henry, I will not go down into the shelter unless you allow me to play poker with all the gold in your vaults."

In August of 1941 my husband, after many mysterious consultations, told me he was going to take a little trip up through the Cape Cod Canal and that he wished to do some fishing. Then he smiled, and I knew he was not telling me all that he was going to do.

I had already learned never to ask questions when information was not volunteered, but during the war the habit became almost an obsession with me. I was always fearful that because I saw a great many people I might let slip something that should not be told, so I used to beg my husband to tell me no secrets. Many times it was impossible not to know something was afoot, but, if I made no effort to find out what, my knowledge was pretty vague.

Used a Standin

FRANKLIN invited some friends to go with him for the first few days of this Cape Cod cruise, and the trip was well covered in the news. He was seen by crowds of people from the shores of the canal and then—blank! Later he himself loved to tell the story of how he changed from the presidential yacht to the cruiser, the U. S. S. Augusta, which steamed up the coast and into the Harbor of Argentia, where he met Prime Minister Churchill.

The fact that he had pulled the trip off without being discovered gave him a keen sense of satisfaction. He used to chuckle as he told of the presidential yacht sailing quietly through the canal for a whole day with a gentleman looking more or less like Franklin in size but with a cap pulled well down over his eyes sitting on the deck waving. Franklin loved little mysteries of this kind and, of course, the story was a perfect one for a good raconteur, which he was. He used such stories to make conversation when he did not want to talk seriously. Once the incident was all over no harm could come sharing it with guests.

Occasionally I felt that Franklin was being indiscreet, because he seemed to trust his guests never to repeat what they heard at the dinner table, but I came to realize afterward that at such times he never told anything that could do real harm and that he was actually testing the people at the table. If a story got out he usually had a pretty good idea who had repeated it. Very often the identity of the correspondent who got the story would be clue enough, and while it might not matter on that particular occasion it was well to know who was likely to talk.

Pearl Harbor Day began quietly. We were expecting quite a large party for luncheon, and I was disappointed but not surprised when Franklin sent word a short time before lunch that he did not see how he could possibly join us. He had been increasingly worried for some time and frequently at the last moment would tell me that he could not come to some large gathering we had planned.

People naturally wanted to listen to what Franklin had to say, but the fact that he carried so many secrets in his head made it necessary for him to watch everything he said, which in itself was exhausting. In addition, anxiety as well as the dampness had made his sinus condition bad, which necessitated daily treatment of his nose. I worried about this, for I felt that, though the treatment might help temporarily, in the long run it must irritate. Sometimes Franklin decided to eat alone in his study; sometimes he had Harry Hopkins or a secretary or some person with whom he wished to talk privately eat with him.

Stunning Information

THERE have been many accounts written about Pearl Harbor Day, and one or two of them vary slightly, but this fact—that Franklin did not come to lunch with us—I clearly remember.

Harry Hopkins ate with Franklin in the study that day, and there were 31 of us at lunch. By the time lunch was over news had come of the attack on Pearl Harbor, but we did not hear it until we went upstairs, when the ushers told me. The information was so stunning that there was complete quiet, and then we took up our uum. I saw my guests off and next occupation in a kind of vac- then waited till Franklin was alone to slip in, but I realized he was concentrating on what had to be done and would not talk about what had happened till this first strain was over, so I went back to work.

A few minutes after 3 o'clock the Secretaries of War and Navy, Admiral Beardall, my husband's Naval aide, Secretaries McIntyre and Early and Grace Tully were all in Franklin's study on the second floor of the White House. They were soon joined by General Marshall and the Secretary of State. Later, when we did have a chance to talk, I thought that in spite of anxiety, Franklin was in a way more serene than he had appeared in a long time. I think it was steadying to know finally that the die was cast. One could no longer do anything but face the fact that this country was at war. From here on, difficult and dangerous though the future looked, it presented a clearer challenge than the long uncertainty of the past.

It is curious how at such times one's anxiety for the Nation and one's personal anxiety emerge as one. For a woman the personal side comes more strongly to the fore. In the White House, however, I knew that the personal side would have to be subordinated.

The next day was a busy one for all of us. I went to the Civilian Defense office at 9 a. m. as usual, but returned to the White House shortly before noon to accompany my husband to the Capitol to hear him deliver his message to a joint session of Congress. I was living all over again, it seemed to me, the day President Wilson addressed the Congress to announce our entry into World War I. Now the President of the United States was my husband, and for the second time in my life I was hearing a President tell the Congress that this Nation was engaged in a war. I was deeply unhappy. I remembered my anxities about my husband and brother when World War I began; now I had four sons of military age.

In retrospect it is easy to see things that were obscure at the time. My husband had long suspected these Japanese dreams of grandeur and domination existed, but anyone who dared to speak of such suspicions would immediately have been called a warmonger. With war all about us we still lived on an "island," where most people felt war was an impossibility. Wishful thinking is one of our besetting sins. After Franklin's message to Congress war was a grim reality to the whole country.

30-Cent Television Adapter Worthless, A. B. Dumont Says

Pittsburgh, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—Dr. Allen B. Dumont, president of the Dumont Laboratories, Clifton, N. J., said today that commercial exploitation of a 30-cent color television adapter is fantastic.

"We've known about that color wheel for years—since 1928," he said. He referred to a system devised by a New Jersey man recently. The system, three panels to a wheel, brought experimental color broadcasts in on a black-and-white set recently.

"It's virtually impossible to synchronize a rough setup like that with broadcasting wavelengths," Dr. Dumont said.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

NICK GASTON made night club news last month when he opened an expensive new room, the Latin Quarter, in the slump of the entertainment season and managed to pack the three floors of the Old New Orleans nightly with customers.

Now he's trying to continue the policy that worked so well. Dwight Fiske was the personality the guests were so anxious to see then. George Kreisler, mentioned by a New York critic for "songs with a Fiskian flavor," is his newest attraction.

Critic Robert Dana provides us further description of the incoming performer. "George Kreisler is not only a clever lyricist but a piano raconteur of charm and persuasion. All his songs can stand on their own for their wit. Tall, dark, and rather studious looking, he affects a droopy dead-pan delivery that is perfect for the songs he has devised for himself." Flavor of these songs can be guessed by their titles—"It's Great to Lead an Antiseptic Life," "You Bore Me," and "Please Shoot Your Husband."

Kreisler, in his early 30's, has less name and a more youthful and refreshing air than Fiske, but he should appeal to the same people.

Also in the floor show will be five young Washington girls with a new production of dancing numbers. Not exactly newcomers to the business, they include Loraine DeBoe, known as Miss Television of 1949 and a beauty contest winner; Betty Cannon, Miss Virginia of 1949; Barbara Browning, and Barbara Russell—led by Lynn Hoffman, who gave up New York night club engagements to teach dancing here with her parents.

MR. and Mrs. Jack Davis, owners of the Brook Farm, recently demonstrated their faith in the ample proportions of their food by offerng a second steak dinner to anyone who felt the first one was not sufficient.

They weren't really taking much of a gamble because Brook Farm tables are customarily laden with enough food to satisfy the hungriest. However, seven eager young men, with considerable experience as members of a luncheon club, did order a second one, and some of them managed to finish it—with what gastronomic results from overeating we are unable at this writing to report.

The old, inn-type farm house is a real inducement to travel out to 6501 Brookville rd., Chevy Chase. It offers a fine opportunity to relax as you eat. The main dining room, a huge, high-ceilinged room, with great rafters overhead, is replete with early American antiques and brass work.

Alexandria City Hall Plans New Switchboard

A new telephone switchboard will be installed in Alexandria City Hall within two months, City Manager W. Guy Ancell announced yesterday, replacing the present manual system.

The switchboard, to be put in at a cost of $1000, will be maintained by two full-time operators. It will make it possible to dial city hall and be transferred to the desired department, instead of calling each department on its own number, as at present.

If I Could Know

If I could read your thoughts tonight . . . And know that you were true . . . There would be nothing on this earth . . . I would not do for you . . . There would not be an obstacle . . . Too great to overcome . . . Or any price that might appear . . . To be too large a sum . . . But I am always wondering . . . What things you think about . . . And every word you whisper seems . . . To magnify my doubt . . . And when you laugh and toss your head . . . My heart is in despair . . . Because I have a feeling that . . . You do not really care . . . I wish that I could read your mind . . . When I converse with you . . . Or I could hear your lips declare . . . Your promise to be true.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

The Gentleman Proved His Point

Paul Coughlin, Yellow Cab driver, picked up an Army officer and started for Alexandria as bidden.

"The reason I took a cab," confided the fare, "is that whenever I drink, I don't drive. I park my car, and get one of you boys to take me home."

"A good idea," agreed Paul.

"Yessir," continued the officer. "Whiskey and alcohol just will not mix."

"Don't you mean gasoline and alcohol?" asked Paul.

"See what I mean," replied the fare, "I can't even talk straight so how can I hope to drive?"

KID STUFF

Mrs. K. Howe tells me that she recently got a lesson in English from a little girl of about two.

When Mama saw jelly on the child's face, she said: "Come on, I'll wash your face off." The little girl immediately began to cry.

"I don't want my face washed off," she wailed. "I want it on."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I have been riding streetcars since the motive power was furnished by Dobbin—more years than I care to admit.

In that time, I suppose I've lost the average number of things. But whenever I suspected that I left them on a streetcar or bus, I made inquiry and often found that my lost property was waiting for me at the Capital Transit office.

For example, last week I left a valuable umbrella, someplace. Today I asked Capital Transit about it—and they had it.

Bill, if you ever want to get rid of your wife, don't leave her on a streetcar, or she'll turn up in Capital Transit's safe.

Pop Grey.

Dear Pop:

Since when did you take to writing prose? Couldn't you find a rhyme for umbrella? Bill.

SUGGESTION BOX

A party-line subscriber writes: "We waited a long time for our telephones, and when we got them we resolved to use them in the friendliest and most efficient manner possible.

"If we pick up the receiver and find a conversation in progress, by common agreement that's a signal that the party who is talking has 5 minutes to conclude his business and clear the line. It works just fine."

PERSONAL NOTES

John B. Hulse, Truck-Trailer Manufacturers Association: It's hard to believe that the automobile is an inherently safer means of transportation than the horse. The article you quote cites figures for only one year—1909. But what's the rest of the statistical story? If Grandpa's transportation death rate was higher than ours, it's a wonder any of us survived.

Mrs. George J. Stafford, 1326 Euclid st. nw.: Thank you. Glad it worked out okay.

Mrs. H. D. Albin: Yes, you may use a postoffice box number for replies to a Give-Away listing if a telephone is not available. The reason I never use street addresses any more is that I found that scores of readers undertook long journeys to claim pets, only to find that the first few callers had gotten everything available. A phone call is much more convenient.

HOLE-Y MATRIMONY

Of selfsame styles and stocks.
But while she wears her toeless shoes
I'm stuck with toeless socks.

NEW POLICY

Gordon McBride reports that a new wisecrack is circulating in the neighborhood of 15th and K sts. nw. these days.

The Continental Life Insurance Co. recently changed the name of the Investment Building, which it owns, to the "Continental Building." Ever since, the jokesters have been saying:

"It wasn't worthy of Continental, so we lost our Investment."

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Gretchen Hood of 1226 Fairmont st. nw. reports that a fellow who was sent to Israel on an assignment ran into an old pal of his named Mike Reilly.

"What a surprise," he said. "What are you doing over here, Mike?"

"Oh," replied Reilly casually, "just living the life of Cohen."

SUSIE Q.

"But, Mr. Smith, I don't want to be home till twelve . . ."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Mao, Stalin Debate Manchuria

By Drew Pearson

A secret month-long poker game between a former Georgia priest and a Chinese peasant may settle the fate of all Asia. This is the confidential advice given President Truman by Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Pearson

The game is in Moscow and the players are Josef Stalin, shrewd and impassive, who sits opposite China's Communist boss, Mao Tze-tung. The prize is Manchuria, the rich northern provinces of China eyed with sharp desire by both czars and politburos for more than a century.

Mao went to Moscow December 6. He is still there. Coded cables to Washington say a stubborn quarrel over Manchuria has prolonged what should have been a brief formal visit. Stalin has proposed an autonomous Manchuria under an out-and-out Moscow stooge, Li Li-san. Mao, on the other hand, is insisting Russia live up to its August 14, 1945, treaty with China which recognizes Chinese "full sovereignty" over Manchuria.

Mao is a tough customer who knows he must show a streak of independence to keep his hold over the Chinese people. Like Yugoslavia's Tito he has complete control over his own army, but if Mao returns home without Manchuria and with commitments to supply Russia with troops, laborers and food, Mao will lose face ingloriously.

While the poker game goes on in Moscow, the Soviet is secretly trying to undermine Mao. Hundreds of Soviet officials, parading as farm advisers, military experts, engineers and welfare officials are moving into the Chinese Communist government, and now control its propaganda machine.

A few days ago at the State Department there was a round-table discussion between an American, a Chinese and a Filipino. The State Department man asked, "But what can non-Communist China do? You have no leaders." The Chinese agreed, "That is true but we do not need leaders. If Mao sells out to a foreign power, the Chinese people will take care of him."

Life in "G. O. P."

"The secret Republican caucus over reviving the gag law" in the Rules Committee showed that there's life in the "Grand Old Party" yet.

House Leader Joe Martin was for the gag, but he didn't try to shut off debate on the hot issue. "Speaker Rayburn," he warned, "wants to get off the spot himself and put us on it. If the Cox resolution reinstating the gag rules passes, he won't have to bring up the fair employment practices bill and therefore won't be criticized by his Southern constituents. But at the same time Northern Democrats will accuse us of being against civil rights.

"Nonetheless, while I am for FEPC and will vote for it if the Democrats give us a chance.

Waving newspaper editorials from his district, Congressman John W. Heselton of Massachusetts declared that his constituents were overwhelmingly opposed to gagging legislation.

Representative J. Harry McGregor of Ohio chimed in: "I'm also unalterably opposed to this gag procedure. If we are going to win elections, we've got to take a stand on all issues instead of dodging them. We're hurting the party by 'me-tooing' the Dixiecrats and passing the buck back to the Rules Committee."

Former GOP Floor Leader Charles Halleck of Indiana tried vainly to stem the oratorical tide, chiding his rebellious colleagues:

"I remember when a lot of you fellows who now oppose this resolution to change the rules came to me during the Eightieth Congress urging that certain bills be held up in the Rules Committee. Some of you are not being very consistent."

However, Halleck's dig seemed to inflame the insurgents further. Representatives Clifford Case of New Jersey and Jack Javits of New York served notice that GOP support of the Cox resolution would "play into the hands of the Democratic opposition" in the next election.

Hits Southern Dems

Another foe of the "gag rule," Representative Reid Murray of Wisconsin lashed out at Southern Democrats for inveigling Republicans into a political coalition against civil rights.

"Our Southern colleagues use us when they need our support to protect Southern economy, but that's the extent to which they want to play ball. I'm getting tired of it."

NOTE: Despite Murray's outspoken remarks, which may have been tinged with bitterness over losing the oleo fight, Republicans who have been used by Dixiecrats can blame only themselves. Broad-gauged Southern House members like Stephen Pace of Georgia, Brooks Hays of Arkansas, Percy Priest of Tennessee, Hugo Sims of South Carolina, Wright Patman of Texas and Tom Steed of Oklahoma—to mention only a few—have played stronger roles against sectional politics than most Northerners.
